

Turnabout

continued

It was black with grease until Bob took it out on the driveway and scrubbed and bleached it clean.

SPECIALITY OF the house, Bob says, is "wild game — any kind." Often he bags it himself during annual hunting trips out west or to northern Michigan.

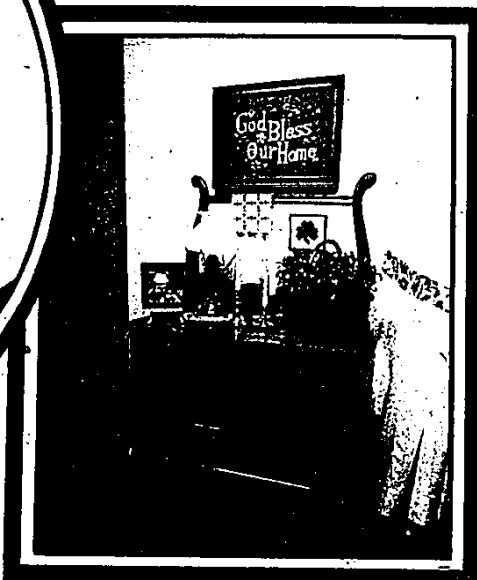

The couple meet regularly with four other couples for gourmet affairs. Bob, incidentally, is the only male cook in the group. He learned to cook in the army and that's why "crowds don't bother me," he adds.

It's the Doughertys turn next month to be dinner hosts. Bob is already gearing up for the feast. On the menu will be wild turkey (which he shot himself) with all the trimmings.

"It'll be Thanksgiving Day in May," he smiles.

If her husband is king in the kitchen, Liz Dougherty is queen of the greenhouse the couple added to her home. A leaded glass door found in her mother-in-law's attic makes a perfect complement. The greenhouse is in full view of the living-room-turned-dining-room used for entertaining.
