

Hearns views amateur boxing

Thomas Hearns, a gangling, soft-spoken 20-year-old, has captured the fancy of the Detroit-area boxing crowd.

The welterweight, if he defeats Bruce Curry tonight in Olympia Stadium, will have won as many professional bouts without a defeat as he has lived years.

From Hearns' first pro outing November 25, 1977, when he recorded a second-round TKO over Cincinnati's Jerome Hill through May 20 of this year, when Hearns stopped Harold Weston from New York, on a seventh-round TKO, the Detroit has been progressing toward a shot at the world championship.

Hearns started boxing when he accompanied a friend to the King Solomon Boxing Club 10 years ago. Hearns compiled a 147-6 record while progressing through the competitive amateur ranks.

The 6-1 native of Memphis, Tenn., was Midwest Regional Junior Olympic champion in 1974, Michigan Golden Gloves and AAU champion in 1975, a national AAU finalist in 1976 and a national Golden Gloves and AAU titlist in 1977.

PARALLELING Hearns' successful pugilistic career has been the development of amateur boxing clubs in the western suburbs.

Naturally, whenever the object of a sport is to batter an opponent into submission, parents and prospective participants should be concerned about safety.

OK, Thomas Hearns. Let's say you had a son who was interested in joining a boxing club. Since you've been active in the ring half your life and you're now making money there, what factors would be important in your evaluation? "A good coach, someone who really knows boxing," said Hearns in a barely audible voice.

"Someone who really knows how to work with kids," he continued. "You have to have patience. Not everyone is a fast learner.

Hearns said that he didn't know what qualities marked the good coach from a bad coach when he started at King Solomon, but he took to the sport like a bee to honey.

"I was doing really good at it. As I went down the line, I felt it might be my living," he said.

There are differences between boxing as an amateur and as a professional other than the fact that the former involves performing for show and the latter for dough.

The biggest change, according to Hearns, is that the professional needs more stamina to take and give punches over a four-to-15 round bout as opposed to going all-out for three rounds like the amateur.

"In boxing, you're in there for one thing — to take care of business and go on to other things," said Hearns.

"THERE IS FUN in (professional) boxing, but it's a very dangerous sport," he continued. "Every so often, you look at it as fun, but not all the time. You have to be serious in the ring all the time."

However, showmanship is also involved in boxing to a great degree. Some champions — Muhammad Ali, for example — had charisma which drew people to a sport whose foundation, pure and simple, is brutality.

"You are entertaining," said Hearns. "The crowd comes to see a great fight and you have to give them what they come for."

Hearns usually does just that, from the moment he steps into the ring and begins staring at an opponent with his penetrating brown eyes. Seven of Hearns' 19 victories have come on knockouts within the first three rounds.

IN SPITE OF having a great amount of natural talent, Hearns subscribes to the philosophy that hard work can sometimes be the great equalizer.

He said that he hasn't really been doing things that much differently now than he did in his amateur days.

"I try to work a little harder, put in more hours and more effort," said Hearns. "Boxing is a sport I really enjoy doing."

He also realizes that for every Thomas Hearns who has made a dent in the boxing world, there are hundreds of Joe Palookas who have been dented by the system.

Two goals by Brad Brodsky, the last coming with less than one minute remaining in the second overtime, helped the Cougars to a 2-1 win over the Wolverines in the 9-10-year-old championship of the West Bloomfield Soccer League last Sunday.

Coach Ed Brown's Cougars got some outstanding defensive play from goalie Richard Winkelman and fullbacks Todd Brown, Larry Cavallaro and Brian Sterling. Mickey Hannan scored the Wolverines lone goal.

The Cougars had advanced to the finals after a 2-1 victory over the Warriors on Saturday. Marty Wolf scored both markers for the Cougars.

In the 7-8-year-old division, goalie Johnny Erskin recorded his eighth shutout of the season as the Cosmos topped the Express, 2-0 in Sunday's final.

Sean Stillwell and Mark Sonnenberg scored for the Cosmos, while Dennis Talbot, Rusty Hermans and Brian Sonnenberg provided solid defense.

In Saturday's semifinal contest, the Cosmos beat the Racoons, 3-1. Naven Sinha, Randy LaBelle and Stillwell were the goal scorers for Coach Larry Sonnenberg's Cosmos.

The Black Knights got two goals from Jimmy Craft and single tallies from Tracy Schweizer and Dave Levine to defeat the Express, 4-0, Sunday, in the 11-13-year-old finals.

Ted Englosky and Chip Schultz shared the goalkeeping duties for Coach Cor Arons Black Knights.

The Knights almost never made it to the finals, as they edged the Warriors, 1-0, in Saturday's semifinal contest. Levine scored the game's only goal with just over two minutes remaining in regulation time. Schultz recorded the shutout for the Knights.
