

Getting a taste of college

Several students are currently participating in the summer science institute at Lawrence Institute of Technology. From left: Mike Renbarger and Phil Roselli, students at North Farmington High; Gayle Daharvak, a student at Harrison; Gary Waterman and David Shortt, students at Farmington High. They are among 60 outstanding high school students attending the special six week LIT program, which includes instruction by college faculty, field trips, and speeches by visiting corporate and scientific leaders.

Gardens need more work

There's still plenty to do during July if you have a garden and lawn, according to Michigan State University Extension specialists.

Following are several hints they give for lawn and garden care:

Watch for aphids and leafhoppers damaging honeylocust and maple trees. Give ladybugs and other natural predators a chance to control aphids. In severe cases, use a malathion spray.

To control lacebugs on andromeda, azalea and sycamore, spray malathion or Sevin on the undersides of the leaves.

A general yellowing of foliage on spruce and hemlock may indicate spider mite problems. Shake branches over white paper to reveal the tiny pests. A kelethane spray should control them.

Fertilize trees before Aug. 1. Fertilizing later may stimulate new growth that will be susceptible to winter injury. During dry weather, water trees and shrubs thoroughly once a week, especially newly planted ones.

Check daily on houseplants set outside for the summer. Plants in clay pots may need watering once or twice a day. Plants may also become infested with insects or infested by mildew or other diseases. Control pests as soon as you detect them.

Control perennial weeds like bentgrass, quackgrass and tall fescue now. Use lawn herbicides carefully to avoid injuring trees, shrubs, flowers and garden crops.

Village has Children's programs

Children ages 4-15 can enjoy special educational activities — such as attending school in a one-room schoolhouse or learning an Early American craft — during the summer education term at Greenfield Village on weekdays and/or weekends through Aug. 18.

For example, the "When Grandma and Grandpa Were Young" program introduces children ages 4-7 to the tools, furnishings and way of life of the 1920s and 1930s. Children ages 11-15 can learn tinsmithing. Those 12-15 can learn photography.

Other courses are appropriate for children of various ages. Cloth-making includes spinning wool into yarn, dyeing it with natural dyes and finally weaving or knitting it.
