It has always been held proper for the "man" to use every aggressive, or subtle, or sly tactic at his command to win his "bride". Now we politely call his fierce competition "eligible bachelors." And the woman? Well, straw skirted or pantalooned, she has always considered this "fight" for her a compliment. In fact, in the olden days, a man who was not a "fighter" was considered a weakling.

Marriage by capture in primitive societies was imperative as they held the belief that marriage within the tribe was taboo. To get a bride they were forced to raid their neighbor tribe, usually hostile. On the man's part, this took guts and courage and was rightly considered a feat of strength.

The women have their side, too. Authorities believe that there was a so-called "pairing-off" season, possibly June, and that some women made it a point to stray from the safety of the tribal confines for the very specific purpose of "being carried off."

The admiration of manly strength and prowess has never been unfounded. Today, as in primitive times, food, shelter and the protection of wife and child depend upon the man's keenness of eye and his stamina to do battle with life as he finds it.

Oh, Jewellers! In not just a woman's world—but a man's world too. The groom-to-be should come with his fiancée. His man's eye can judge the sureness of artistry in good design in silver, china and crystal. Our Jewellers have an excellent selection of suitable Groomsmen gifts—cigarette lighters or cases, key chains, tie clips or cuff links. All can be personalized. Be sure to bring your Groom-to-be on your next visit to Orin's.
