MORALS

A community is judged by its moral tone.

A community is judged by its moral tone.

Courtesy should be extended a sail times to the weaker sex Courtesy in thought, and deside settended to women on all occasions.

The older folks should at all times be careful as to their actions of the word and deed because the younger folks readily follow the two propers of their elders.

Politeness and courtesy are attributes which man has picked up through the uplifting of his conscience and his power to know right and wrong.

Soon they began to decide what was for the best interest of all in morals, customs and practice. Today we find many groups of men under separate and various governments Religion is divided into several groups, the most important being Christian, Mohannadism and Pagah.

Each religion has its code of oright and wrong—we christians are all familiar with the ten commandments. The other religions and their branches each have their coffe of morals.

It is therefore evident that right and wrong and morals are a question of geography.

the wrong and morals are a question of geography.

However, we who believe in the teachings of Christ feel that the divine will and power has given to us bur ten commandments to live up to and it is our most sacred duty to live as God would have Clean-Honest-Straight forward lives, and our missions is to protect the weak and to guard the sancity of our youls.

Ladies Literary Club.

Those who were not present at the last meeting of the Ladies Literary club held January 5th, at the home of Ernestine Pierce, missed a rare treat.

The program consisted of an interesting article on "The Position of Women in Holland" read by Esther Boynton, "Dutch and Flemish Arts and Artists" with copies of paintings by famous artists, Bertha Steele and an exceptionally good paper on "Folk Lore of Holland," by Agnes Chamber-

After the program Miss Boynton recited two-old English ballads which were greatly enjoyed by all. The club will meet January 19th will meet January 19th
