IS HAVEN FOR WEARY

Doctors, Taxes, Policemen Unknown in Tristan da Cunha.

Chaplain Tells of a Wonderful Island Where Lawyers and Doctors Never Invade

Eduard Alres—The island of Tristan da Cunha is a curious and unspoiled haven of rest for the weary soul, a place for the seafarer to get away from worries of life, and the chaplain of the British coast-guard station, which has just returned from a visit to that isolated spot.

"No need to worry over money there, for there is none," said the chaplain. "There are no taxes, no doctors, no lawyers, no policemen, no post office, not even a head man. No ships and mail arrive, with luck, about once every two years."

"There is not even any medicine, and the last supply of medicines was thrown into the sea by the inhabitants, who are remarkably healthy, and are unknown."

"Tristan is a British possession in the South Atlantic, between Africa and South America. It is a small, conical peak towers nearly 3,000 feet above sea-level. It is only 2 1/2 miles in circumference. The nearest inhabited place is St. Helena, 1,300 miles away. The island itself is of volcanic origin, the only habitable portion of it being a tongue of fertile land at the foot of the precipitous cliffs.

"Sufficient potatoes are grown in plots to meet the needs of the inhabitants. Cattle and sheep were introduced years ago and many cattle now run wild. Clothes are only to be obtained by bartering from ships that call. For protection to the few people make necessaries of leather, hide. Wonderful socks are made by the women from wool carded by themselves.

"From June to October of last year the people had been without hot tea, coffee and sugar, but they all looked pretty well nourished."

The reason there is no bread is that fifty or sixty years ago a shipwreck near the island allowed rats to get ashore, so that since that time no wheat has been raised. But the men say that they are going to try again when the next mail in a year or two brings them some seed wheat. In the meantime they are to grow their own wheat. And to supplement their potatoes, fish are abundant, and cattle and birds with their eggs and seeds they want for many things, says the chaplain, nevertheless there appears to be little discontent, and few ever wish to leave the island.

GOING TO SEA IN BOWL

What is that old story about going to sea in a peanut shell? Almost the same thing here, only a brass kettle takes the place of the peanut shell to some parts of India this convenience is used by travelers for fording shallow streams. The mystery about the picture is to find the man's legs. Are they sticking through the bottom of the pot or has he in some unexplained manner been able to double them up under him? It's a curious puzzle.

SAXOPHONE LURE HITS ARMY

Washington—The lure of the saxophone has hit army musicians hard. Reports from Leader Weber, chief of the band recruit school at Columbus Barracks, Ohio, to the war department, say he is overwhelmed with requests for instruction in producing "jazz" melodies on this instrument.

BLACK CAT RESTORES SIGHT

War Veteran Sees Dimly After Fight—Blacking in River Does the Rest.

London—Charles Appleby, who served in France in the Royal Air Force in 1914, was severely wounded in the Ypres conflict. He lay unconscious in a hospital for ten months with a fractured skull, and when he recovered, was blind. He was sent to St. Dunstan's hospital.

While there a black cat jumped on Appleby's head. The shock had the effect of enabling him to see just a glimpse of daylight with his left eye. He left the hospital and returned to Kibson, being able to go about with a dog to lead him.

He wandered into the river a few weeks later, but was rescued. It was then found that the shock of the incident had partly restored the sight of the right eye.

He was given several powerful electric shocks, and, how, after having been blind for four years, he has fully recovered his sight.
