BREAK OF SPRING IS RESULT OF NEGLECT

Clips Work Loose in Spite of All Precautions.

Inspection Should Be Made at Least Once a Month and the Slightest Play Taken Up by Tightening Nuts and Bolts.

Few parts of the car are more important and few more neglected than the springs. It is hardly unpleasant to have a spring break when on tour, but it is frequent when one gets off the good highways on to the more or less "bumpy" country roads, according to H. Clifford Brinkman of West Side Y. M. C. A. Auto school, New York city.

Nearly always the breakages are the result of neglect. In spite of every precaution, the spring clips will work loose on the majority of cars. This weakens the spring and it is likely to break one or more of the spring leaves or snap off the bolts holding the clip in place. The spring clips should be inspected at least once a month and the slightest play should be taken up by tightening the nuts. The thread of the bolt should be examined for signs of stripping and when it has begun it is wise to replace the part.

Lock washers will help to keep the clips tight but their use should not be regarded as a reason for neglecting frequent inspection. It may be necessary to put a small strip of leather under the clips at the small end of the spring to take up play. Almost invariably these work loose in time and need a strip of leather or some other soft material to keep them from rattling.

The rebound clips also most invariably work loose and rattle. They need to be tightened and, if necessary, the tape may be wound around the lower part of the clip to prevent noise when it strikes the spring. The spring shackles should also be kept well lubricated and the bolts should be renewed when worn.
