VARIED SHOW AT 72ND STATE FAIR

PROGRAM TO BE HAPPY MINGLING OF FARM AND CITY FEATURES

FUN AND ENTERTAINMENT ALONG WITH INSTRUCTION

State Gov. Ephaphroditus Ransom established in Michigan 72 years ago the first state fair held west of the Allegheny mountains, the citizens of this commonwealth have witnessed annually an exhibition designed to mirror the industries and activities of the two peninsulas.

In founding the Michigan State Fair, Gov. Ransom and the farmer-statesmen associated with him demonstrated a progressiveness and enterprise which has been characteristic of the state's whole scheme of public education.

It is well to recall at this time that the fair was founded by them with earnest educational ideals; that it was the first attempt at agricultural education in the west; and that from the first the Michigan State Fair became the first agricultural college in the world—the Michigan Agricultural College at East Lansing.

Since those historic days Michigan has undergone great changes. It has evolved from a forest into thousands of fertile farms, and from the farms into a magnificently balanced empire of agriculture, manufacture and commerce.

In our fair this year we shall, therefore, attempt to show the whole varied collection of Michigan's activities—in far as its factories, fisheries, and its homes and inhabitants.

We shall show the bit of Detroit, the bit of the nation, we shall show the thermometer industry which in the last decade and a half has transformed the whole state; we shall show the first aid to motors—Good Roads. We shall show how health is maintained in cities, the art and beauty that may be put in homes, the fineries of urban civilization. But in so doing we shall not forget that the fair must devote itself conscientiously to encourage the agricultural interests of the state and to stimulate them forward to new efficiency and prosperity.

And thus in our coming seventy-second fair, we shall hope to mingle in happy proportions a program which will show the best of farm life to city folk and the most modern of city comfort to the man, who the world over.

With it all will be fun and entertainment, clean in every particular and of the highest type known to fair managements anywhere.

To this pot-pourri of instruction and industry, health and happiness, fun and farming, the Michigan State Fair cordially invites the public of Michigan, hoping that the ten days and nights of activity will leave behind them memories of royal good times and a feeling that something of real usefulness has been accomplished.
