Fourth at Northville

Goers the pitcher. Goers wrenched his knee and was unable to continue the game. Tredway, in making a run after a foul ball ran into a crate that was in his path but did not see it on account of watching the ball. Turning a complete somersault he landed on his shoulder and ankle, spraining the latter severely. This fall and the heat knocked him out completely. With the loss of these two players the game was called off at a score of 4 to 4. Northville won the following game and the score was 3 to 4.

Interrittantly through the races sports were arranged for the young people and chief among them was the egg race, trying to catch the greased pig, the night gown race, and the ice cream eating contest. Commendable is the spirit of the youngster who climbed the greased pole after the one dollar bill. This was accomplished thru the help of several other little fellows, but the boy's stick-to-itiveness, his determination to get to the top was the true American spirit.

Another slight accident marred the day when a little girl in crossing the track was knocked down by a horse. She immediately arose and walked away, apparently unhurt.

Band concerts were given in the morning and afternoon and in the evening the Northville band furnished music for a street dance. Old fashioned dances to old-fashioned tunes seemed to appeal to the dancers more than the new airs. Taken as a whole the day at Northville was a great success, many not returning until late in the evening.

Figures That Stagger.

It is probable the human population of this earth, itself only a winning atom in ideal darkness, rises to upward of two billions, and is certainly not less than 1,500,000,000. But how many creatures of all kinds has prolific nature spawned upon this relatively minute speck in cosmos? If Noah took a pair of every living species about his ark, how vast an army did he have with him on his great flotilla, and how large must have been that mighty bark?

MAY PERFECT OUR WARFARE

British Expert Desires Chemicals Less Cruel Than his Weapons of War

London.—Sir William J. Pope, professor of chemistry in the University of Cambridge and president of the Society of Chemical Industry, reports in The Chemical Age that a civil war has come to stay, and pleads for an open recognition by the government of poison gas research.

He says that in the war poison was less fatal and far less cruel than any other weapon; and points out that it would be simple to devise high explosive shells which would liberate large quantities of carbon monoxide, against which all known protective measures are useless.

"No reason," he says, "exists why a chemical should not be made which does not kill, but produces local anaesthesia, causes violent sneezing for a few hours, or leads to some form of physiological intoxication which may prove of great military value."

Lighting Deafens Horses.

Columbia City, Ind.—Four horses in a barn at the farm of Frank Jones, five miles southwest of this city, were made deaf by a stroke of lightning the other day. A bolt struck the west side of the barn during a storm and ripped off the entire west side and part of the roof.

Seven hens were sitting on eggs. The eggs under five of the hens were broken to bits, but the hens were not hurt. Mr. Jones and his son left the building a few moments before it was struck. The barn did not take fire.
