The skipper was examining an ambitious boy who wanted to be a gunner's mate.

"How much does a six-pound shell weigh?" he asked.

"I don't know," the boy confessed.

"Well, what time does the twelve o'clock train leave?"

"Twelve o'clock," how much does a six-pound shell weigh?

"Ah," said the youthful mariner, a great light dawned on him. "Twelve pounds." — The American Legion Weekly.

Conference Agreeing on Naval Limitations but Apart on China Questions.

FRANCE'S NEED OF STRONG ARMY, DUE TO FEAR OF GERMAN AGGRESSION, CONVINCINGLY SET FORTH—Tax Bill Becomes Law and Congress Adjourns.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CONCORD and discord both were apparent in the armament conference last week. It appeared the Hughes plan for naval holiday and limitation would soon be accepted formally almost exactly as he proposed. Great Britain intimated the "5-5-8" ratio without reservation and made it known that she desired only to suggest some modification of the submarine and replacement features of the plan as a whole. The Japanese, though still arguing that they should have 70 per cent of the naval strength of Great Britain and the United States, evidently were prepared to yield with the expectation of some concessions in their favor relative to China. But the British, at home, already are growing impatient. As soon as the Hughes plan was given out the admiralty stopped work, on day it announced that unless a decision relative to naval limitation were reached by the conference within two weeks, work on the battleships would be resumed before Christmas. The admiralty may have been influenced in this by the fact that our congress adjourned without ordering cessation of work on our new ships.

As for the dispute, it arises over two subjects: land armament limitation and China. Concerning the reduction of armaments the feeling is between France and England and the British colonies. The feeling is between France and England and the British colonies. The feeling is between France and England and the British colonies.

PREMIER BRIAND, in a wonderful address, told the conference that the world just why France does not now reduce her land force too far. Without hesitation he set forth frankly his country's fears of Germany. With facts and figures he made plain the possibility that Germany might again and almost within a day be come a powerful and dangerous military nation and that a considerable portion of the German people look forward to this as shown by quotations from Luedendorff, who still has a large following. Briand did not fail to give generous praise to Wirth's generous and admitted that there were many people, especially among the working classes, who want to work and want no more war. The French may they represent, he said, France would do all in her power to help. He said, until there was a "moral disarmament" as well as a physical in Germany, and unless France was assured of the continued support of the United States, France could not lay herself out to attack Germany. "We have to know," he said, "that France is not morally isolated, that she still has the hearts of all people who have fought with her on the same battlefield."

As for the charge that Briand and the French who follow him are bent on middle supremacy, this, the premier said, "is the most painful, heart-rending and cruel thing a Frenchman can hear."

It is impossible, such as one would like to do so, to quote more of Mr. Briand's eloquent speech. Suffice it to say that to an unprepared mind

It was an ample reply to the anti-French propaganda of Wells et al., and that it did not fall of effect on his fellow conferees. Arthur Balfour was the first to respond, and Secretary Hughes followed him. Balfour's speech was that their countries appreciated the position of France and virtually pledged the support for which he had pleaded, though of course both were careful not to promise an equivalent in international law for the Anglo-French-American defensive treaty which Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Wilson signed, but which never was submitted to the American senate. Mr. Hughes arranged that the question of land armament should be further considered by a committee, but the impression was general that it would be permitted to die, at least so far as limitation is concerned, and this impression was strengthened by the departure of M. Briand and the French military section for home, the premier being secure in the belief that his country would not now be asked to reduce its army further than its present plans contemplate. One other cause of debate he had interjected into his argument. This was the claim of France to keep an ample number of submarines for the defense of her long sea coast. "For what can France wish submarines except to attack England?" cried the propagandists at once. To which the only adequate reply is laughter.

IT WAS foreseen that the Chinese problem would be the most troublesome for the conference, for obvious reasons. At this writing the conference has not yet reached a decision on the question whether the Anglo-Japanese treaty will be abrogated, and if so, whether some sort of a tripartite agreement will be substituted for it. Unless the former is done, probably the discussion will be fruitless; and unless the latter is done, it is likely Great Britain will not consent to the former. On Monday the eight powers sitting in the committee on the Chinese problem, the program originated by Elihu Root by which these points were made sure:

There will be no intervention by foreign powers in the present political struggle in China. The territorial and administrative integrity of the Asiatic republic is assured. Japan and all the other nations agreed to refrain from granting concessions to commercial rights and privileges there. The "open door" finds a new definition.

Baron Kato won a decided victory for Japan when he persuaded the committee virtually to recognize that Manchuria, though an integral part of China, is so thoroughly in possession of the Japanese that the status quo should be maintained there. This divergence of views among the British, French and Chinese as to how the Root principles are to be applied to specific matters. At the close of the week the Chinese proposals for lifting foreign restrictions on China's customs revenue were being considered by a subcommittee. One concession had been won by the Oriental republic—permission to increase its tariff rate from 5 per cent to 12 1/2 per cent. So far as is now apparent, the idea of restoring to China the various parts of her territory now held by other powers, has gone into the discard. That question is complicated by the fact that Russians have control of outer Mongolia and have set up a Mongolian soviet there. Moreover Tschichir, Russian minister of foreign affairs, says they intend to stay there, and it is beyond thought that any of the nations represented in the Washington conference should undertake to assist them.

WITH the final adoption of two measures of importance—the tax bill and the anti-medical beer bill—congress would adjourn the business of the special session and adjournment. The senators and representatives will have about ten days' vacation before the regular session meets. Enactment of the tax bill into law means the repeal of transportation taxes and a considerable number of other miscellaneous taxes on January 1, 1922. While the repeal of the excess profits tax and the changes in corporation income tax and individual surtax rates also become effective on that date, taxpayers will not get the benefit of the changes until they pay their taxes in the early part of 1923 on income of the calendar year 1922. The individual taxpayer will get the benefit of increased exemptions applying to dependents and to heads of families with moderate incomes on their taxes paid in 1923 on 1922 income.

The chief features of the new law are substitution of a 12 1/2 per cent flat corporation income tax for the excess profits tax and the present normal tax of 10 per cent, retention of present normal taxes on individual incomes, but a decrease in surtax rates, the new maximum being 50 per cent instead of 65, repeal of a number of miscellaneous taxes, and innovation of some new manufacturing taxes.

E. MONT REILY, governor of Porto Rico, arrived in New York the other day, and almost immediately afterward Senator Cordell Hull, resident commissioner from the island in Washington, received cabled instructions from San Juan to request President Harding to remove the governor from office for insubordination and indifference against Reily are:

He publicly declared himself leader of the Insular Republican party, "the friend of the Socialists."

Annulled the "franchise" of judges by announcing they would be removed if a decision was rendered "considered by the governor unjust."

Pardoned criminals, let loose Socialist leaders, and the criminals immediately committed new crimes.

"Directed or permitted" police to break up reception orchestra to greet Antonio Barcelo, president of the senate, and leader of the United party, after promoting the poll of office who broke up the demonstration."

Appointed three departmental heads "opposed to the spirit of the island act and to the laws of Porto Rico," on recommendation of "corporation directors reside outside Porto Rico."

DIPLOMATIC relations between the United States and Germany were resumed last week by exchange of ambassadorial cables in Paris and the arrival in Washington of Baron Edmund von Tscherning as chargé d'affaires to prepare the embassy. The German ambassador in Berlin is sitting up the building with furnishings plain and inexpensive, enough to suit the most democratic having brought most of them from Berlin. Any extravagance in the decorations of the poverty of the German government. With is now seeking foreign credits to enable it to pay the reparations and customs installments due the allies, early next year.

The riots and strikes in Berlin, due to high prices of food and the low value of the mark, are spreading to many other parts of the country, and the government is said to be in fear of monarchist and communist uprisings. A general strike is threatened unless those arrested in the riots are released.

IN RELIEF, too, there has been relief, too, resulting in the death of a dozen or more persons and the looting of many stores. The clashes, judging from the cable reports, seem to have been instigated by the Orange men. Bombs were used freely and with deadly effect, and the military was unable to stop the sniping of the speaker of the Dáil, Dr. Eoin MacNeill, accused the British government of organizing "the most horrible of all the kinds of war in Ireland—a war as fanatical as the religious wars of the seventeenth century."

The Irish delegates met with the British cabinet members on Wednesday, but what progress they made was not made public.
