Cards One Thousand Years Old.

The statement, often repeated and apparently very generally believed, that playing cards were invented and first used to distract the melancholy Charles VI of France is not correct; there is a pack in the British museum known to be more than 1100 years old and there were undoubtedly Japanese and Chinese cards in the Twelfth century.

Mosquito Plague in Alaska.

Alaskan mosquitoes do not act as carriers of malaria and yellow fever as do those of the United States and tropics, but they are very vicious. They literally fill the air. In one sweep of an insect collecting net about his head, Dr. Aulich was able to capture 110 mosquitoes by actual count.

Airplane Used to Test Air.

In a study of the smoke nuisance at Salt Lake City an airplane was used to collect samples of air at different levels.

Inver

Inver is a prefix in the Gaelic language, and it means a confluence of rivers, the place where two rivers come together. The prefix is used to Scotland, particularly in the north, as an element of place names, as in the name Inverness. The River Ness here joins the arm of the sea known as Moray firth. Inverness is the confluence or junction of the River Ness.

Tree's Bark Resembles Lace.

The inner bark of the locust tree, growing in the West Indies, separates after maceration in water into layers resembling coarse lace. Frits and ruffles made of it were sent from Jamaica as a present to Charles I. The bark is used in making ropes and whips.

Patriotism Big Part of Life.

Of the whole sum of human life no small part is that which consists of a man's relations to his country and his feelings concerning it.—W. D. Howells.
