Home Ceremony Unites Couple

A candlelight ceremony before the fireplace in the bride's home united Jane Anne Vallier and David L. Fey in marriage Monday, Dec. 29.

Mr. and Mrs. A.E. Vallier of Pennington Avenue, Plymouth, are the bride's parents. The bridegroom is the son of Albert R. Fey of Higgins Lake and the late Gertrude Fey.

Christmas greens and poinsettias decorated the Vallier home for the wedding officiated by Dr. Henry Walch of the First United Presbyterian Church of Plymouth.

Organist Karen McAllister played traditional music before the ceremony and the bride's father gave her in marriage.

IVORY PEAU DE SOIE fashioned the bride's Victorian gown. The skirt was full and the shirred bodice and sleeves featured French tucking and lace. The bride carried white roses and holly.

Mary Vallier was her sister's only attendant. Her short-sleeved, Empire gown was Christmas green silk and she carried red roses and holly.

Douglas Fey, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

FOR THE CEREMONY and dinner reception for 200 in the Mayflower Meeting House, the bride's mother selected a pastel brocade gown with gold trim and gold accessories.

The bride is a 1968 graduate of Smith College, and the bridegroom holds degrees from Harvard University and the University of Chicago Business School.

The couple will live in San Antonio, Texas, where the bridegroom is stationed with the U.S. Army.

MRS. JAMES MICHAEL GLEESON

Gleeson-Kindy Vows Spoken

Kay Lorraine Kindy and James Michael Gleeson exchanged marriage vows Saturday, Dec. 27, in an afternoon ceremony in the poinsettia-decked First Presbyterian Church of Ann Arbor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Kindy of Rapid River, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gleeson of Ravenwood Avenue, Farmington, are parents of the bridegroom.

The Rev. Harold Horan officiated and the bride's father gave her in marriage. Susan Schoen played cello selections from the music of Handel.

IVORY PEAU DE SOIE fashioned the bride's skimmer gown with lace trim, jewel neckline, trumpet sleeves and a detachable chapel length train.

Her veil of ivory illusion was secured with a camelot cape that matched her gown, and she carried ivory roses with holly.

July Lacina was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Judi Gleeson, sister of the bridegroom, and Kathy Murphy, cousin of the bride. Their Edwardian gowns featured moss green velvet skirts and lace bodices and sleeves. They wore matching bows and veils for headpieces and carried ivory poinsettias.

DANA HOUSTAN was best man and the guests were seated by Jim Franks and John Powell.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Kindy chose a dove gray suit and Mrs. Gleeson wore an apricot skimmer dress.

A church reception and a family dinner followed the rites. The newlyweds both graduated from the University of Michigan Dec. 13 and will fly to California and the Rose Bowl for their honeymoon.

They plan to live in East Lansing. The new Mrs. Gleeson, a member of Alpha Omega Pi sorority, earned her degree in education and will teach in the Lansing area. Her husband plans to do graduate work in industrial engineering at Michigan State University, where he has a graduate assistantship. He is affiliated with Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

In all marriage

ceremonies, the

word's spoken

for and by the

Bride and Groom

are considered

binding—by law

always, and in

a religious ceremony, binding before God,

in earlier, primitive times,

words or just the signs of words were thought to have a magic power in themselves.

Thus, the chant or incantation to cast a spell. We're sophisticated today, so we say

"I do's" but keep on watching people "tuck" However, these magic hold-overs pervade all wedding cus-

oms, and one of the more interesting touchings

takes place in Scandinavian

Weddings.

The word "know" is said to be derived from a root in

the Runic Alphabet. It corresponds to our letter "N."

The bridegroom takes his Bride's hand in his — and draws this rune-stave, or letter on her finger. This symbolizes her loving and binding union to him in marriage.

Orin Jewellers, too, recognizes the binding nature of marriage and feels that a couple's whole future life together must be considered.

For this reason, we are very proud of our matching ring sets and wedding bands —

the symbol of this union.

For the formal announcement or invitation for this important event, we offer the bride the very finest in engraving styles, paper and

workmanship.

The essence of gracious living is recreated in the manner of yesterday's legendary metalmiths. This antique silver chandelier makes an important contribution to the authenticity of a room furnished with antiques or reproductions, or it can be a striking accent in a contemporary interior.
