SPANISH DOUBLOONS By CAMILLA KENTON Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Company (CHAPTER XIV—Continued.) Mr. Shaw now spoke for the first time.

"Miss Browne, I do not recognize the justice of your standpoint in this matter. I have done and am still prepared to do my best in the business of the treasure. If Mr. Tubbs will not give his information except for a bribe, I say—let him keep it. I shall continue the search for the treasure on the same line as at present."

"One moment," said Miss Browne haughtily. "She had never spoken otherwise than haughtily to Mr. Shaw since the episode of the Wise Woman of Dumbledykes. 'One moment, James—and you Mr. Tubbs—' and they moved off out of earshot, where they stood with their backs to us and their heads together."

"It was my opportunity," Violet herself had proposed that the original agreement—the agreement which bound me to ask for no share of the treasure—should be canceled. No hiding now was necessary to the ripening of my hopes but to induce Eugene Shaw to immolate himself. Would he do so—on my bare word? There was no time to explain anything—he must trust me."

he held out his hand. I laid mine in it—we stood hand in hand, comrades at last. Without a word more he turned away and strode toward the compact of the group dissolved and moved rapidly toward us. Miss Brown, exultant, beaming, was in the van. She set her substantial feet on a chargee raving the ear. You might almost have said that the infuriated Aunt Jane was roused and writing. Mr. Tubbs were a perfect poker face. The great game of bluff would have suited him to a nicety."

"Miss Brown advised," said Cuthbert Vand as he stepped back in an ardent clasp. "Mr. Vane," she said with solemnity, "I thank you—in the name of this expedition I thank you—for the influence you have exerted on my friends. And this seemed to be to the noble youth the most valuable of all the shocks of that eventful morning."

"No one had bothered to secure Cooke and he knelt among the logs and pans of his open-air kitchen, pouring forth petitions in a steady stream. Blackbeard, who seemed a jovial brute, burst into a loud guffaw. 'Ha, ha! I look at old Soot-and-Cinders gittin' hisself ready for glory!' He approached the negro and aimed at him a black which Cooke, arising with unexpected nimbleness, contrived to dodge. 'Jolly good, savvy,' he announced. 'Them with a screw driven in, will you? I could stand one good feed after the fore-castle slops we had livin' on.'

"Never guessed I wasn't here just to do the shovel work, but I'll leave my own little side-show to blow off, hey?" inquired of no one in particular. "Here, Slinker, he has his two revolvers. The man addressed at this his pistol in his belt and came forward, and with his help the hands of the Scotchman, Cuthbert Vane and Mr. Tubbs were secured. They were searched for arms, and, by the way, knives which Mr. Shaw had Cuthbert carried at their belts were taken away. The three prisoners were then ordered to seat themselves in a row on the trunk of a forest tree. The whole thing had happened in the strangest silence. I except for a feeble moaning from Aunt Jane, like the bleating of a sheep, which broke forth at intervals, nobody spoke or made a sound. Big the foreman in the background, standing like imps with their venous, raised, looked like a well-trained chorus in an opera. And indeed it was all extraordinary, as I like something of a stage. Slinker, for instance. He had a prowling, sidelong fashion of moving about, and enormous vulgar mistakes like a V.I.G., and the burly fellow in the background with the black whiskers—too bad he'd forgotten his earrings."

and briskly boxed the captain's ears. Furious he caught my wrist. 'Ah you red-headed little devil, you'll pay for this! I ain't pretty, eh, not a little handsome man, like the flour-cake; I ain't got a title, nor piny pluk cheeks, nor fine gentlemanly ways. No walks with the likes of me, no tatey-tates in the woods—oh, no! Well, it's goin' to be another story, my girl. I guess you can learn to like my looks, with a little help from my fist now and then, just as well as you done the Honorable. I guess I won't be long before I have you crawling on your knees to me for a word of kindness. I guess—'

"'Aw, stow that soft stuff, Magnus,' advised Slinker. 'You can do your spoonin' with the gal later on. We're here to get that gold, and don't you forget it. Plenty of regular work, because of pains in the back, had headaches and dizzy spells. 'But I have gained several pounds now since taking Tonic and eat just anything I want without any trouble. The pains and headaches are gone, I am more, and I am only too glad to pass the good word along about Tonic. It is simply wonderful.' Tonic is sold by all good druggists.

Furiouly He Caught My Wrist. slipped from him and fled to Aunt Jane—yes, to Aunt Jane—and clung to her convulsively. Miss Higgleby-Browne seemed to have petrified, from skin had a withered look, and a fine network of lines showed on it, and, suddenly clear, like a tracery on parchment. Beyond her I saw the face of Dugald Shaw, gray with a steely wrath. A gun had been trained upon him and Cuthbert, and the bearer thereof was arguing with them profanely. I suppose the prisoners had threatened outbreak at the spectacle of the chin-chucking.

CHAPTER V. Like a Chapter Four, The Past. Five men had emerged from the woods behind the clearing, so quietly that they were in the center of the camp before Cruso's shrill bark, or the outcry of the cook, warned us of their presence. By that time they had covered. Three of them carried rifles, the other two revolvers. One of these was Captain Magnus.

"Magnus," responded Tony with severity. "I'd make a person think to hear you talk that you wasn't no gentleman. If you can't keep little Red-top in order without you to her, why, then hand her over to a guy what can't be wouldn't have a speck of trouble with her, and me would get along as sweet as two turle-doves." "You dry up, Tony," said Magnus, lowering. "I'll look after my own affairs of the heart. Anyway, here's been these two old rones what you'd makin' me sick with their jabber and nonsense all these weeks. Ain't I goin' to have a chance to get square?" "Here, youss!" struck in Slinker, "let your jaw!" Here's a feed we ain't seen the like of in weeks." (TO BE CONTINUED.)
