'Necessity the Mother of Invention'

That's the reason we have Lanterns and Flashlights. Our lanterns are easy to light, but hard to put out. They have a dandy burner; it doesn't smoke up the glass. Got to have a lantern on your wagon now, or you'll get a bump from an auto some dark night. You need a lantern that won't blow out in a heavy wind or storm, and that's the kind we sell. Handy things to have around doing chores, too. You can use a Flashlight for a lot of purposes where a lantern won't do, so you need both. Flashlights are safe and convenient. We carry a fine make, and the price is moderate.

WEEKS WITHOUT SUNDAYS

Twenty-four-hour days and weeks without Sundays are a peculiar part of public utility life. Despite this fact the men and women who have raised this service to its present degree of importance and excellence lead normal lives.

Theirs are neither Sundayless weeks or sleepless nights, unless the record of uninterrupted supply is imperiled by flood, storm, fire, or wind. Under such circumstances there is no employee who considers night or day. The dominating instinct is to keep the lines open. This is our job.
