

Personalities based on old '4 elements'

Dear Gundella: I spent Christmas vacation at my grandmother's house in Livonia. She clips all of your columns and saves them in a scrapbook. I enjoyed reading them.

On March 23, 1978, you wrote a column about the four elements: earth, air, fire, and water. You said that peoples' personalities were symbolized by these.

Could you please explain what you meant? If you answer this in your column, my grandmother will get it and save it for me.
Chris S., Philadelphia

Dear Chris: Earth is associated with the body and with material or temporal things.

Air is representative of the breath, the soul or spirit, thought and speech.

Fire is symbolic of energy and emotions. That is why we speak of "fiery" passions.

Water is the lifeblood of mankind — the fount and origin of all things — the primeval waters from which we sprang, and the subconscious depths of the human mind.

Confidential to Joan K.: I read your 15-page letter in which you describe all the problems you are having with your husband. You asked that I send you a spell, but you did not include your return address.

Also, you did not specify what kind of spell you wanted. From your letter, I cannot tell whether you want a love spell, to make him settle down and stay with you; an alcoholic spell, to discourage his drinking; or a money spell, to increase your finances, and enable you to "take" him.

Please write again, and be more specific.

Why puppy should be examined soon

Q. I have a new puppy. When should I take him to the veterinarian and what things will be needed?

A. You should have your puppy examined by your veterinarian as soon as you get him.

Take a small sample of his stool with you to have it examined microscopically for worm eggs.

The puppy will need a series of vaccinations which will vary according to his age. Diseases routinely vaccinated against include distemper, adenovirus, hepatitis, leptospirosis, parainfluenza and rabies.

Bordetella and parvovirus vaccines may also be given if your dog will have frequent contact with numerous other dogs such as at dog shows or kennels.

Daily heartworm preventative should be given to your puppy during the mosquito season and for two months after the mosquitoes are gone. It is available as tablets, liquid, and as chewable flavored treats.

When he is older your dog will need annual boosters, physical and dental exams, stool tests, and heartworm tests each spring.
