Legal lingerie ain't misbehaving

The woman with a penchant for delectable lingerie no longer has to hide her ribbons and lace.

Some of the prettiest of the pretties available this season are just as at home when worn on the outside rather than the inside.

And it's no accident — designers are deliberately producing gowns, camisoles and other confections that lead a double life.

Brenda Schebel of Lingerie at Somerset Mall in Troy says the trend is extending to the swimsuit line. Bikinis and maillots come with cover-ups that can take them from beach to a party with ease.

The store carries a wide selection of swimsuits, but really shines when it comes to the apparel that's just too pretty to leave at home.

Most of the major designers have a line of lingerie, much of which is suitable for street wear.

The lines usually carry a less steep price tag than regular designer clothes.

For instance, a red silk robe and one-shoulder gown by Shuba costs more than $500 for the ensemble, but could be worn to the most elegant of events.

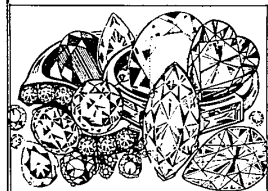

The robe even has padded shoulders.

It looks like a beautiful, sexy dress, but it's lingerie status makes it less expensive than a similar silk ensemble sold as outer wear.

Some of the more sheer items are

This bikini by Gottex has a matching cover-up to extend its life beyond the beach. Both the bikini ($44) and the skirt ($170) are touched with gold piping. Lingerie also carried swimwear designs by Ariel and Norma Kamali, OMO.

Ultra-Thin Dress Quartz
that's ultra-fine jewelry.
From Lady Seiko.

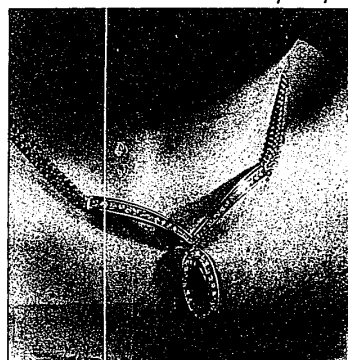

Seiko advances a woman's watch to the peak of sophistication. To a dazzling jewelry look. Rich in simplicity. Exciting in its ultra-thin dimensions. It never needs winding and never loses its impeccable quartz accuracy. In yellow with a gilt dial (left) or yellow with a gilt dial (center). Or white with a white dial. Seiko Quartz.
