& BathThe old
plumbing 'blahs'...

Many a first home is an older house or apartment that suffers from the "blahs." Probably the most discouraging room is the bathroom with its outdated plumbing and generally dreary look.

It's expensive to completely remodel this room and, if the plumbing works, other rooms come first. What to do?

Spray paint, a few inexpensive accessories and some ingenuity can do a lot to give a bathroom a new, more contemporary look. New York Designer Peter Davis restyled his old bathroom with several cans of Krylon enamel—spraying a brightly colored chevron pattern over the walls, shower curtain and towels.

Here is how you can liven up your own bathroom in the same way.

If the room has not recently been painted, give it a fresh coat of white semi-gloss or enamel. Before you start painting, check out all the places where appliances and cabinets are attached to the wall. Fill in any gaps with Elmer's all-purpose acrylic latex caulk. It is easy to apply and smooth out, and can be painted over so that patching doesn't show.

After the paint has dried, add the touches which will make your bathroom unique and will bring it into modern times, by spray painting a colorful design across the walls, the shower and window curtains—even across the towels and cabinets. Horizontal or vertical stripes, polka dots or the chevron stripes are only a few of the designs you can do, using an easy-to-make stencil.

For decorating with the chevron stripe shown, make four stencils each with two cardboard (a shirt or other cardboard approximately 8 1/2" x 14") taped together overlapping to make an L-shape. Cut a 1" notch in outer corner of L.

Using a metal tape measure, measure up 50", 52", 54", 56" from the floor, and measure 10" wide units and lightly mark with soft pencil. The width of each chevron, as well as the height at which you can paint it, can be adjusted to the dimensions of your particular bathroom.

Start in one corner of the room, place the first stencil on the wall at the lowest mark and spray. Hold the Krylon can about 12" from the surface and spray evenly, moving your arm, not your hand, from the lower left mark up to notch and down to next mark. (If you haven't done this before, test out spraying a design on newspaper.)

In a room with ten chevron units, spray all even units with one color and then go back and spray odd units of the same color. Krylon dries quickly so that the first stripe will probably be dry at the starting point by the time you want to begin the second series of chevrons several inches up, using a fresh stencil and a different color.

You can spray the same pattern over inexpensive white shower, window curtains and even on towels. Lay the item on the floor, spreading newspapers around the edges where you will be spraying. Tape or weight the corners down if they won't stay flat.

Spray paint from one side to the other, allowing at least 10 minutes for each color to dry before applying the next. You'll need to apply two coats to the towels, and perhaps to the curtains, depending on the absorbency factor of the fabrics. (Do not be anxious to spray too much color at one time.)

For a final touch use the same design for the sides of plastic face tissue and other bathroom boxes.
