

1980 O&E All-Area volleyball squad

Spikers show all-around ability

The team's most valuable player, McColgan led Rochester to a 16-5 record and a Greater Oakland Athletic League championship.
Foretta has several state schools and at least three out of state colleges — University of Miami (Fla.), South Carolina and Marquette — interested in her. One of the reasons for the interest is her 10 percent kill average on spikes (hits that are unreturned).
She helped Lahser attain a 16-4 season record and runner-up status in the Metro Suburban Association (MSA). Foretta also excelled in the classroom with a 3.8 grade point average.

One reason that Lahser finished second to Groves in the MSA was the play of Groves' Forhan. A 6-foot senior, Groves' coach Roger Campbell thinks Forhan hasn't yet reached her potential.
"I think she's about halfway to where she's going," Campbell said. "She is improved so much from last year and she can still improve a lot more."
Forhan was Groves top attacker. Her strongest points were spiking and blocking.
"She was the mainstay in our offense," Campbell said.

WALKER, A 5-9 senior, played an important part in turning around Troy's volleyball program. Walker emigrated from West Virginia, where she was the state's MVP a year ago, this year. Her play enabled Troy to advance to the state Class B semifinals before they lost to Livonia Clarenceville.
"I think it contributed a great deal," Mary Haezebrouck said of how Walker's presence helped the Troy team jell.
"The other five girls were all seniors and were ready for a good year, but she solidified the team."
Again, several schools are interested in having Walker bring her volleyball skills to their program. With 80 percent of her spikes either unreturned or leading to points for Troy, the college's interest is understandable.

Hughes, a 5-8 junior, "led the team in almost every stat," according to North coach Sandy Lubieniecki. Hughes really got her game in high gear in the last half of the season after Lubieniecki made some lineup adjustments to put in another setter for Hughes' spikes.
"Like many other volleyball underclassmen, Hughes will be attending several camps this summer. At last year's Olympic Development camp at Western Michigan University, Hughes was picked in the top group of players from among 256 girls, several of whom were compiled on the collegiate level.

She played a 50 percent kill average on spikes during the season. At the moment, Tadrzynski is in the running for one of five volleyball scholarships available at Central Michigan University.

Nine players were selected to the O&E second team. They are: Linda Bacha, Farmington Hills; Jeanne Gilbert, Kingswood; Annie Bauer and Ann Bonacci, Rochester; Missy Thoms, Southfield-Lathrup; Amy Haagen and Chris Dichting, Lahser; Chris Looser, Farmington; and Karen Crawfis, Groves.
