

One vacation trip that remains consistently popular in England and Scotland. The Community House in Birmingham has planned such a trip May 13-27, offering two weeks of comprehensive sightseeing.

Britain is an island world of astonishing variety and character, old and new at the same time. Scotland is a land of lakes and mountains, tartans and bippies and of ruggedly independent people.

Participants on The Community House trip will travel from Bath, the Cotswold Hills, Gloucester, Stratford upon Avon and Durham to Hadrian's Wall, Edinburgh, the picturesque east coast of Scotland, York and, of course, London.

They will visit Salisbury and Stonehenge, the Severn Estuary and Wye Valley, Roman ruins, the cathedral at Durrley, Queen of the Jacobites — home of Mary, Queen of Scots.

ROUND-TRIP AIRFARE, plus all land travel on a privately chartered motorcoach; hotel accommodations; almost all meals; authentic medieval banquets at Kenilworth Castle, a royal feast at the castle at Sirrington on the Strand, are included in the travel package.

Participants will receive tickets to the theater in Stratford upon Avon, as well as to the London Admiralty Theatre. Tickets to other shows throughout the trip are also included in the cost.

The all-inclusive vacation includes luggage handling, local service charges and taxes, all transfers from Birmingham to Bath, to Birmingham and to the services of a professional tour guide.

Information brochures on the England and Scotland trip are available at The Community House, Bates and Community House, Inc., you may call The Community House, 644-5832, for further information.

The Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford closes its season with Jack Heinfer's adult comedy "Vanities." Performances are scheduled at 8:30 p.m. April 18, 19, 25, 26, 27, May 2 and 3, and at 2:30 p.m. May 4.

Beech Day (just south of Five Mile Road), Redford. Information or tickets are available by calling 255-2547.

The guild's cheerleaders are Claudia Hill of Birmingham, Carole McNulty of Livonia, and Barbara Kline of Dearborn.

Ms. Hill received her B.S. in dramatic arts and speech from Eastern Michigan University and has appeared in major roles, both dramatic and musical, with Theatre of the Arts dinner theatre, Greenwich Village Players and Dearborn Summer Repertory Theatre.

MS. MARTIN, who played leading roles in "How to Succeed in Business" and "A Day in the Death of Joe Egg" for Livonia-Redford, received the best actress award in Detroit's Rury Theatre Festival in 1973 and has appeared with Dearborn County College and Roseville Community Players.

Ms. McNulty also was seen this season in "Joe Egg." Her previous credits include "My Fat Friend" and "Relatively Speaking" with the guild and numerous performances with the Plymouth Theatre Group.

Director Marc McCulloch of Detroit's Midtown Associates has previously directed "Relatively Speaking," "My Three Angels" and "I Do I Do!" for Livonia-Redford. Producing director John J. Livonia has been responsible for many backstage jobs, including stage management and assistant direction.
