KEEP THAT GREAT GM FEELING WITH GENUINE GM PARTS.

Keep repair records

The bill you received when you picked up your car from the repair garage can serve a more useful purpose than cluttering up the glove box.

Receipts form a useful record of all service done on the car when logged and filed in a folder.

Checking the log periodically can help you plan the car's maintenance needs in the coming months by comparing the records to your car's recommended schedule of maintenance, as outlined in the owner's manual. This can lead to more dependable driving by reducing unexpected and inconvenient repairs.

The log and folder also can aid in money planning. Many times the repair order will have a notation of other items that soon will need service. Those notations, plus a review of scheduled maintenance, will permit you to adjust your budget accordingly or even shop the ads for a sale on the work the car will soon need.

Also, by sharing the records with your mechanic you can avoid premature duplication of service, such as performing a lube job when one was recently performed.

Simple record-keeping by saving service invoices can make it easier to stick to your car's schedule of maintenance.
