

Before accepting that new car, check it out

The first in budget-wise care and service is buying a car in perfect condition. To be sure your new car has no built-in defects or service headaches and that you know how to operate it, make the following checks before leaving the dealer's lot.

Read the owner's manual carefully. Sit in the driver's seat and, before you start the car, have the salesman explain the starting procedure, the dashboard gauges and warning lights, and the operation of all controls and accessories.

Read the warranty carefully and note the services that are free and those for which you must pay. No warranty, however, will cover normal wear or abusive use.

Examine the exterior for dents, irregularities or paint scratches. Check the interior for wrinkled or mist floor mats; look at the seats, door panels and headlining for scuffs, tears, or crooked seams.

Open and shut the doors to see if they fit the frame and latch properly. Roll the windows up and down. Do they work smoothly and close all the way?

Look in the trunk for the spare wheel and tire, the tire jack, and the lug wrench. Ask the salesman or service manager to show you how to operate the jack.

Look in the engine compartment. Is it clean and new looking? Ask the salesman to show you how to check the oil and coolant levels.

START THE ENGINE and listen for any roughness or noise after it has warmed up.

For an automatic transmission, set the emergency brake and then shift to "drive." The engine should continue to run smoothly and not stall.

Road test the car. It should accelerate without jerks or hesitations, the brakes should work evenly and effectively, and the steering should be responsive and smooth.

Try the horn and windshield wipers and wipers. Have the salesman try all the lights and the turn signals while you stand outside the car and check their operation.

If the car fails to satisfy you on any of these points, insist that the fault be corrected before you accept delivery. In addition, be sure you understand the warranty provisions. What free repairs and services does it offer? When must you bring in the car for checks and adjustments?

YOU CAN AVOID a number of service and repair problems for your new car by careful driving for the first 2,000 miles while the moving parts are "settling in." Follow the directions in your Owner's Manual and these supplementary suggestions.

During the first 1,000 miles, drive at moderate speeds. Accelerate gently, especially in the lower gears, and vary the speed frequently. Do not pull a trailer.

During the next 1,000 miles, accelerate moderately, change speed occasionally during highway driving, and don't pull a trailer.

Every few days, inspect the driveway or garage floor where you park. If you find a spot, observe its color and location under the car so you can pass the information along to the service technician. Leak repair should be free during the warranty period.

Continue occasional checks for leaks as long as you own the car.
