Farmington Hills residents include: Douglas Maier, a criminal justice major; Olga Onisko, a legal administrator major; Cindy Storer, with a child care and guidance major; Brett Royer with a criminal justice/sociology major; Lynn Wooten with a biology/chemistry major and honors; and Gail Elliot with a degree in computer science. Other Farmington Hills residents who graduated from the school are: Judith Grant with high honors in nursing; Janice Saddington; Debra and Diane Jonna with degrees in nursing. Carole Duquette of Farmington Hills received a bachelor's in gerontology, and Irene Sutor of Farmington Hills earned an associates of science degree in child care and guidance. There are 494 graduates involved in the recent commencement.

Drugs-sun mix is dangerous

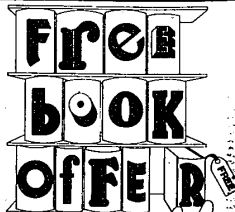

The summer months ahead mean fun in the sun, but the Clinical Pharmacy Academy of the Michigan Pharmacists Association cautions the public to beware.

A number of prescription drug products may cause serious skin reactions when individuals taking these drugs are exposed to direct rays of the sun.

Drugs which can cause these problems include tranquilizers such as chlorpromazine and promazine; antiemetics such as prochlorperazine and antihistamines such as trimethoprim and promethazine; antihypertensives, water pills and the tetracyclines; sulfa drugs, oral diabetic drugs and quinine.

Patients taking these drugs who are outdoors and exposed to direct sunlight over a considerable period of time should use a sunscreen product containing a benzophenone that will absorb light.

If you're not sure if you're taking one of the types of medications mentioned above, consult your local pharmacist.
