Plum Hollow hosts trophy

More caddies in Michigan will have the opportunity to become Evans Scholars with full college scholarships because of a new Pro/Am tournament on June 16 at Plum Hollow Golf Club in Southfield.

The first Evans Scholarship Pro/Am Invitational Golf Tournament will attract 124 amateurs and 31 Michigan professional golfers. Thirty-one foursomes will consist of one professional and four amateur golfers.

Entry fee per amateur is $200 with the major portion contributed to the Evans Foundation for college scholarships within the state of Michigan.

Jimmy Demaree, who was the golf professional at Plum Hollow during 1942-43 before he went on to become one of the legends of golf, has been selected to receive the 1980 Honored Golf Professional Award.

"The Pro/Am benefit tournament for Evans scholars is the first such event in the United States where all players will be members of the Par Club," said King Gates, tournament general chairman. "We hope to make this an annual event and perhaps expand it to include other golf clubs."

THE EVANS SCHOLARS Foundation was created by veteran Chicago amateur golfer Chick Evans in 1930. Administered by the Western Golf Association of Golf, Illinois, Evans Scholars now have chapter houses at 14 major universities, including the University of Michigan and Michigan State.

Plum Hollow Golf Club is between Eight and Nine Mile on Lasher Road in Southfield. For more information on the tourney, call 362-2750.

COMMODITIES — A SENSIBLE INVESTMENT ALTERNATIVE

Commodity trading has typically been regarded as a highly speculative activity, with the prospect of large returns tempered by the possibility of equally large losses.

However, we believe the risk of loss in commodity trading may be limited without freely sacrificing the profit potential. This can be accomplished by approaching the commodity markets in a more conservative manner through the application of a systematic trading method combined with stringent risk control and prudent money management techniques. Bache is introducing a comprehensive portfolio investment approach to the commodities markets using computerized trading systems.
