

David Mitchell of Farmington Hills adjusts the amount of sunlight warming his home through his solar energy system.

Home hides solar heating device

(Continued from page 3A) the room. Mitchell's own innovation is the use of only outside air to feed the fire. He also pulls the cooler air from the front of the windows under the tile floor and into the heater. No heat escapes from the room. The fireplace is double-faced with two airtight glass doors on each side to prevent room air loss. Also, the room makes use of natural air convection, where a greenhouse is closed off from the rest of the house. A large ceiling fan in the living room improves the air flow. REFLECTING SURFACES are the fireplace, white walls and white ceiling. For economy, the system works in conjunction with existing hot water gas heating units. The furnace is bypassed by valves when the sun and wood fire provide enough heat. Water in the baseboard units furnishes additional mass for thermal storage and circulation. "It's easier to move heat than to create it," Mitchell said. "I merely made a passive system more efficient."

Cancer is often curable. The fear of cancer is often fatal.

If you're afraid of cancer, you're not alone. The scariest thing about cancer is that they won't go to the doctor when they suspect someone's wrong. They're afraid the doctor might "find something." This kind of fear can prevent them from discovering cancer in the early stages when it's most often curable. These people run the risk of letting cancer scare them to death.
