

Bill Blass recommends always look great." the short evening dress in rich fabric as a good investment for fall '80. "A woman can wear this design to many evening festivities," the popular Coty Award winner stated, "and Blass also sees fall evenings exploding into a cascade of ruffles and flounces or lively and buoyant balloon skirts and pants.

A run on the bank by three well known local furriers wasn't really what it seemed. It was simply a statement of how they are investing their money. And, it's a suggestion of how the rest of us might invest ours.

It is a year for investing in very good things, which means it's also a very good year for furs. Ed Chudik was wearing his own full-length raccoon coat, priced at $3,995, when he turned up at the Franklin branch of Detroit Bank and Trust. Joining him was Harvey Kozin of Wrubel & Kozin. His fur, zip parka in natural, wheat-colored coyote is $1,495. Great coat furrier Bob Roberts of Furs by Robert was wearing natural nutria,

$4,000, when he caught up with Chudik and Kozin.

What the furriers are excited about is the fact that color is news in women's furs this year. That means, they explained, that if a lady already has made an investment in a full length mink and an everyday casual fur, this is the year to add a colored fur.

Among the choices the furriers suggested are a luscious lavender mink jacket, an ombred fox jacket in shades from dark to light blue, and a new rust color fur by Ripa that is mink on one side and beaver on the other.

Strolling through the village on a brisk afternoon calls for a three-quarters-length sculptured jacket in wheat dyed fox, $4,695, Chudik's of Birmingham, Or, for nipper afternoons, a full-length woven coat in spotted opossum by Ripa, $6,500, Wrubel & Kozin.

Her full-length umber dust mink coat is $11,000 at Furs by Robert. His full-length mink coat is from the custom collection at Furs by Robert. Roberts suggests that today's customer might add a colored fur to her closet.
