Drive turns into getaway

A Farmington Hills man was left early Monday evening in a bank parking lot on Middlebelt and 11 Mile to watch helplessly as a presumed buyer for his blue 1979 Chevrolet drove off with the car.

The owner, Brent Gatecliff received a phone call earlier from a man who had seen the car advertised for sale in Trading Times and had represented himself as a potential buyer. The caller wanted directions to Gatecliff's home from Eight Mile and Van Dyke, according to Farmington Hills police.

The man, described to police as having scraggly hair and a mustache and wearing a dirty white shirt with jeans was driven to Farmington Hills by two other men in a metallic brown 1976 or 1976 Buick Regal.

The owner of the Chevrolet drove the car until they reached 11 Mile and Middlebelt when the caller suggested they change places so he could drive. When the owner left the car, the man locked the doors and drove north on Middlebelt.

Prowler leaves empty-handed

A Farmington Hills woman was unharmed after she discovered a prowler in her garage early Sunday morning.

The woman awoke about 3 a.m. after she heard what she thought were raccoons in the garage attached to her home, according to Farmington Hills Police.

Investigating, she surprised a man described as about five foot five, young with dark collar-length hair and a square face. He was wearing a flannel shirt and jeans.

He held a hand over her mouth, saying, "Don't scream, I won't hurt you." When he asked for money, she said she didn't have any. He persisted, pulled out a small pen knife and scratched the right side of her face.

The man fled on foot after she re-peated that she didn't have any money.
