

It's all done with mirrors

From the metal mirrors of ancient times to the ornately framed ones of the rococo era, mirrors have always held a special fascination. But never have they been used with more imagination and flair than right now. From one or two rooms of a home, mirrors have expanded to all rooms and many colors. They add glamor, expand space, give light and create a feeling of luxurious well-being. The Starley brothers, who own Birmingham Glass and Mirror, not only plan and install mirrors, they design many of their own installations. They work with homeowners as well as architects and interior designers. With the present trend of squeezing more room from less space (or, at least the appearance of more room), mirrors play an important role in creating visual illusions.

Fireplace wall mirror frames the focal point of the living room and gives it added depth as well as luster.

Ceiling mirror in the dining room, designed by Birmingham Glass and Mirror, creates the impression of a two-story room in a large home.
