

House OKs aid for refugee children's schooling

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 25 through Oct. 1.

HOUSE

ADJOURNMENT — By a vote of 161-231 against, an attempt to delay adjournment of the House was defeated. Republicans were behind the move. They wanted to force the Democratic majority to complete work on the high-deficit fiscal 1981 budget before election day. As a result of this vote, the House will take final action on the budget during the lame-duck session scheduled for November.

Members voting yes wanted to adjourn on Oct. 2 and confront the fiscal 1981 budget during the lame-duck session.

Reps. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, voted nay.

Reps. David Bonior, D-Mt. Clemens, and James Blanchard, D-Pleasant Ridge, voted nay.

Reps. William Ford, D-Taylor, and William Broadhead, D-Detroit, did not vote.

REFUGEE AID — By a vote of 303-94, the House approved and sent to the president a bill authorizing a $100 million program to help school districts meet the costs of educating the children of Cuban, Haitian and Indochinese refugees.

The bill would give schools at least $450 per year for three years for each Cuban or Haitian child. Districts with large numbers of Cuban, Haitian or Indochinese refugee children would receive up to an additional $750 per child. The bill also includes payments to schools for refugees enrolled in adult classes, along with aid to state and local governments in areas where there are large numbers of refugees.

Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., a supporter of the bill, said: "Since the costs associated with the influx of new refugees resulted from federal immigration policy, it is equitable that the costs be met by all federal taxpayers and not entirely by local taxpayers."

Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, an opponent, said that since the bill would aid those who have not been granted official refugee status, it continues "the piecemeal approach to establishing immigration policy in this country."

Members voting yes favored the aid to school districts.

Pursell, Blanchard and Broomfield voted nay.

Ford, Bonior and Broadhead did not vote.

JOBLESS PAY — By a vote of 336-71, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill providing 10 or more weeks of unemployment checks for the jobless. This is on top of the 39 weeks now available in the state-federal program. The extra 10 weeks of eligibility, which would be in effect for a six-month period beginning Oct. 1, would be totally funded by the U.S. Treasury at a cost of $1.3 billion.

Supporter James Corman, D-Calif., said that if Congress fails to add the 10 weeks, "upwards of half a million American families will exhaust unemployment benefits and possibly be reduced to seeking public assistance."

Opponent John Roussetot, R-Calif., noted that the bill, advocated by President Carter, had been rushed through the House. He called it "alarming" that the administration would want Congress to "take out the rubber stamp and pass a $1.3 billion program into law after so little debate and deliberation."

Members voting yes wanted 10 weeks of unemployment compensation to be added to the 39 weeks already available.

Pursell, Bonior, Ford, Broadhead, Blanchard and Broomfield voted yea.

SENATE

GRAIN EMBARGO — The Senate voted 43-39 to lift the embargo on U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union. The aim of this procedural vote is to prevent the Administration from spending money in an appropriations bill to enforce the embargo. After Russia invaded Afghanistan earlier this year, President Carter imposed the embargo as a punitive measure. The bill was sent to conference with the House. Several more legislative hurdles need to be cleared before the embargo is lifted.

Supporter Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said the embargo "has not been successful. It has cost one group, American farmers, a great deal."

Opponent Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., objected to using an appropriations bill as a vehicle for changing foreign policy, and added: "Nothing works completely, but this embargo has worked."

Senators voting yea wanted U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union to be resumed.

Sens. Donald Riegle and Carl Levin, both Democrats, voted nay.

FEDERAL HIRING — The Senate refused, 29-59, to delete $1.5 million from the Department of Commerce budget. Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said the money would fund 25 high-level positions in the areas of "integrated planning and management... a consolidated grants management function," aiding small and disadvantaged businesses, promoting tourism, and administering merit pay and promotion in the civil service. This vote included the money in a fiscal 1981 appropriations bill later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who supported the move to eliminate the outlay said, "I guess it is a little petty for a senator to question the addition of just $1.5 million, but we have to save money wherever we can."

Hollings said the expenditure to promote tourism in the U.S. "will rebound to us financially as well as otherwise."

Senators voting nay wanted to spend $1.5 million for the 26 positions.

Riegle and Levin voted nay.

CUTTING TAXES — By a vote of 54-38, the Senate tabled an attempt to consider a bill cutting personal and business taxes by $30 billion during the fiscal year which began Oct. 1. Republicans such as Ronald Reagan and many GOP senators advocate an immediate tax cut, while President Carter and many Democratic senators want to delay any massive cut. The vote thus became intertwined with presidential politics.

Supporter Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., called the attempt to force a vote "pure political gimmickry," and added:

- Professional Guidance and Supervision
- Instruction in Small classes

"In this pre-election climate... it would not be the kind of atmosphere... in which to legislate a tax cut."

Opponent William Roth, R-Del., said, "Let me make it perfectly clear. Any member... who votes against allowing the Senate to consider this tax cut is voting for a tax increase on the American people."

Senators voting yea wanted to postpone enactment of a massive tax cut. Riegle and Levin voted yea.
