Local naturalists to give series in schools

Mrs. Eleanor Douglass, president of the Farmington Area Naturalists, has announced that the organization, through its volunteers and as part of its community activity, will again be giving slide-illustrated talks to first- and fourth-grade students in Farmington on spring wildflowers.

"Our experiences in the past show a tremendous interest on the part of the youngsters at these early ages, in wildflowers, their identities, the locations where they can be seen, and the need for their preservation," said Mrs. Douglass.

These programs are being conducted at the schools shown, by the speakers and at times as listed:

• William Grace School, March 16, Kay Wittliff.
• Forest School, March 17, Ruth Chitman and Jeanette Gehrig.
• Beechview School, March 18, Ruth Wiens.

• Middlebelt School, March 20, Eleanor Douglass.
• Wood Creek School, March 24, Nancy Davis.

• Woodale School, March 27, Eleanor Douglass.
• Gill School, March 27, Ruth Chitman and Jeanette Gehrig.

• Kenbrook School, March 31, Norma Henderson.
• Alameda School, April 1, Norma Henderson.

• Flanders School, April 2, Margaret Converse.
• Longacre School, April 2, Margaret Converse.

• Eagle School, April 3, Norma Henderson.
• Lady of Sorrows School, to be announced, Kay Wittliff.

• St. Fabian School, to be announced, Ruth Wiens.

Redhead to reign in Paddy's parade.

The queen, crowned in an emerald-green cape, and her court, Eileen McNamara of Dearborn Heights and Sharon Foley of Warren, in white capes, have already appeared at party to raise funds to defray the cost of the parade, in which they will ride on a float. The court also will be appearing in a mass on St. Patrick's Day and at other Hibernian halls in the area for parties.

The Redford Union High marching band, under the direction of Lincoln Naumoff, also will be in the parade. For Miss Letotte, the Hibernian contest was her second try at an Irish competition. She was a finalist in the earlier Maid of Erin contest, and plans to enter more beauty pageants in the years ahead.

"I'd love to go for a competition to win a scholarship," she said. She has taken ballet lessons for 10 years and now dances six days a week. She plans to keep open her career options and study mathematics this fall at Lawrence Institute of Technology.

"If I break a leg or something, that's it for dancing. I'd go for math. If I make it dancing, that would be great," she said.

"It's just been a great experience."
