

When Mary McFadden leads, so go a lot of other fashion designers. Her forward, modern interpretations of Far Eastern and Oriental designs are probably the most emulated and the most innovative ideas coming from the American designers. McFadden's signature bright color washes have softened for spring-summer this year. Her famous marii pleating adorns evening knickers and floor length culotte skirts. And, she has executed her finite channel quilting on silk into a simple blazer jacket for day. McFadden is still roping and belting everything, but this season her silk cords have changed.

Vibrant ropes of metallic leather, whose function is to entwine the waist, loop around four times and then are knotted in front. Above her softly muted pastels, McFadden believes that the face should also be washed with faint pastels with emphasis placed on kohled eyes in an obvious tip of her hat to ancient Egypt. McFadden also twined the feet in a recent showing with twisted ropes of metallic leather, reminiscent of the Maude Frizon flat.
