"Last Tango in Paris" (1972), 7 and 9:15 p.m. Friday at the Forum Theater, Schoolcraft College, 18600 Hagerly, Livonia, phone 591-6400, ext. 380, $1.50. Running time 129 minutes.
When director Bernardo Bertolucci's "Last Tango" debuted, it was as much a news event as cinematic occasion. Marlon Brando was the first established star to appear in a film that dealt frankly with illicit sexual conduct. Costar Maria Schneider created a furor as she writhed through a variety of encounters and positions in the nude with a clothed Brando. In retrospect, the film has much to say about loneliness and simple man-woman relationships. Brando is only fair, Schneider is better. Bertolucci, who seems to have been given a benefit of artistic doubt by critics, has also seen better days. Rating: 33.

"Desperate Journey" (1942), 12:30 Friday night on Ch. 50. Originally 107 minutes.

"Bedtime for Bozo" (1951), 7:30 to Raul Walsh directed this bit of propaganda which finds Errol Flynn, Alan Hale, Arthur Kennedy and Ronald Reagan stranded behind German lines. Canadian-born Raymond Massey, Hollywood's favorite Nazi, plays the bad guy. Walsh and Flynn teamed for three of WW II's better propaganda pictures, "Northern Pursuit" and "Objective Burma" being the other two. Rating: $2.75.

"The Winning Team" (1952), 2 p.m. Tuesday on Ch. 9. Originally 98 minutes.

No, this isn't the story of campaign '80, or even of campaign '52. It's the story of Grover Cleveland Alexander (Ronald Reagan), the St. Louis Cardinal pitcher who struck out Tony Lazzeri of the New York Yankees with bases loaded and two outs in the 7th inning of the 7th game of the 1925 World Series. The Cards went on to win the game. Those are the true facts. Everything else in this pitcher's mound melodrama is as inflated as Reagan's defense budget. Doris Day and Russ Tamblyn co-star. Rating: $1.75.
