KID'S DAY IN THE FARMINGTON COMMUNITY

Children are among the most important resources of any state or nation. They are our future and our legacy. We need to demonstrate our appreciation for what they mean to society and call attention to their vital needs.

Children depend upon adults as their primary sources of love, protection and care. These responsibilities are critical to us as a society and as a people. To a great extent, it is adult fulfillment of the children's needs which enables young people to realize their potential as integrated individuals and productive members of society.

Our educational children, we dub them, are integrated individuals and as such, and private agencies have a duty to prepare them for the challenges and opportunities of the future.

Children depend upon adults as their primary sources of love, protection and care. These responsibilities are critical to us as a society and as a people. To a great extent, it is adult fulfillment of the children's needs which enables young people to realize their potential as integrated individuals and productive members of society.

In educating children, we prepare them for the future. Citizens, government and private agencies have a duty to work together to provide educational opportunities and to meet their intellectual and recreational needs, not only on this special day but throughout the year.

Therefore, I, William G. Milliken, Governor of the State of Michigan, hereby declare July 21, 1981 to be Kid's Day.

Children to be the future of our state. We must take care of them, not only for Kids, but for the future of our state.

Therefore, I, William G. Milliken, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby declare July 21, 1981 as Kid's Day in the Farmington Community Parks and Recreation Department.
