R.J. is loving, sensitive, sincere

Dear Mrt. Green:
I've enjoyed reading your column in the Observer. I found your comments tery interesting, but have always wished I knew the person you were anadying so I could see how close your comments are to their character. This prompted me to write you allowing you to analyze someone I know; myself.
Along with the comments of the strong positive characteristics, it would be beneficial to know a person's weak characteristics as well, as then one could work to strengthen them. I will enjoy reading your thoughts that my handwriting portrays.

Good finger dexterity is seen in this handwriting sample. Hope you are using this is some productive way.

Security is important to you and you are not going to risk jeopardzing it. You are generally conventional and tude. Living up to the ideals and students of peers and those who make the your to have a generally conventional your your life seems necessary. You feel secure by not before a way a general service your way to work the your way have your way way to work you way to be to have you want to be independent from the control of others.

You have an unmet need for personal recognition and identification for your accomplishments, but I sense you are not receiving this, and especially from the opposite sex.

Personal criticism is not always easy for you to accept. This would be especially true regarding criticism of your appearance or conduct. A bit of sarcsm might be your defense when you feel threatened.

In some areas you seem unrecentive.

From early life I can see nurturing from both parents. However, it seems you did not always feel like you held first place. Was there possibly another family member given more esteem? Since you have asked for both pos-tive and negative aspects of your per-sonality I am giving you more of the objective feedback than I usually fur-nish in the column. Feel free to give me critical feedback on this analysis even though this may be difficult for you to do.

A lung exam could detect heart problem

Can you blow out the candles on the birthday cake with one breath? If your answer is no, then be aware of possible heart and lung problems. This advice comes from the Ameri-can Lung Association of Southeast-ern Michigan (ALASEM).

The good news is that lung tests can forecast heart problems. One common lung test is for Forced Vital Capacity (FVC)—the amount of air forcibly exhaled after maximum inhalation. If you fail, or get a low FVC, then heart problems may also be in your future.

be in your future.

This new warning is based on a 20-year study of more than 5,000 people in Farmingham, Mass. Persons who had the lowest scores wille puffing into a spirometer, an machine used in lung tests, had the highest cardiovascular death rates.
This was true evin when there was no other sign of heart or lung disability, according to Dr. William B.
Kannel of Boston University, overseer of the survey. Among the findings:

• For nonsmoking men with no pulmonary disease or history of heart failure — but with very low FVCs — the death rate from cardiovascular disease was 22 Horono, 100 for men with high FVCs.

• Mortality statistics for women-were lower, but the same ratio held true.

• Congestive heart failure was closely associated with low FVCs. The relationship was "striking at all ages and for both sexes," said Dr. Kannel. He explained: "Even after adjustment for cigarettes and for all the other risk factors, this was the case." Men with low FVCs had 8; incidents of cardiac failure per 1,000, while those with better test had just under 2 per strong heart of the property of the propert

1,000, while those with better teams had just under 2 per 1,000.
