

Injuries claim motorcyclist's life

A 24-year-old West Bloomfield man died early Sunday morning in Providence Hospital of head injuries suffered in an Aug. 22 motorcycle accident on an expressway ramp in Farmington Hills.

Statements made by the man before his death to his father indicate that he might have been forced off the road by another driver.

Colin Ziegler was pronounced dead at 2:45 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 20, at the hospital, where he was being treated for head injuries, a broken arm, broken collarbone and cuts on his left hand, said Bob Garcia, community-services officer for the Michigan State Police in Northville.

The accident occurred at 2:35 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 22, on a ramp leading to eastbound I-656 expressway from northbound I-275. Ziegler's motorcycle left the road, according to State Police accounts, and went onto the shoulder, striking a guardrail. The bike fell on its left side with Ziegler pinned underneath. Police have no eyewitness account of the accident.

Royce C. Ziegler, the victim's father, said Monday that his son may have been forced off the road by another driver. Ziegler said his son discussed the accident when he regained consciousness nearly one week after the crash.

"He said he tried to let them go by on the left, he tried to let them go by him on the right, and he tried to fall back and let them go in front of him, and they creamed him," said the elder Ziegler.

Ziegler said his son's death was "an unusual turnabout" because he had shown improvement before contacting hepatitis and pneumonia in the hospital.

THE IMPACT of the crash caused Ziegler to be dragged 67 feet from the guardrail, Garcia said, while the motorcycle's rear tire traveled 147 feet, and the rest of the cycle went more than 6 feet farther down the road.

Blood tests taken at Botsford Hospital showed no evidence of alcohol or drugs in Ziegler's system, Garcia said.

A helmet found below the expressway ramp, Garcia said, showed no scrape marks, leading investigating officers to suspect that Ziegler wasn't wearing a helmet or hadn't fastened it securely. No ticket was issued despite evidence that Ziegler was driving a motorcycle that still was registered to its previous owner and driving on a suspended license.

The victim's father said his son had just spent $1,000 restoring the motorcycle he'd bought from a friend in California and was testing the bike out the night he crashed.

The elder Ziegler said attempts to determine the license or type of vehicle that may have forced his son off the road were unsuccessful.

The accident victim was a student at Oakland Community College.

Besides his father, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Betty Evans of West Bloomfield; brothers, Kyle and Kim; sister, Kathryn; and grandfathers, Ray Peiffer and Robert Milks.

Funeral services were at St. Fabian Catholic Church of Farmington Hills, and arrangements were by the Ross B. Northrop Funeral Home. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, and donations should be directed to the Michigan Heart Fund.

Area violinist Cheryl Bintz shows she is versatile

By Mary Doerr
staff writer

In a break from its usual custom of presenting professional musicians, Nightcap with Mozart introduced its first non-professional at Friday evening's concert.

Violinist Cheryl Bintz of West Bloomfield is presently a master's degree candidate at the University of Indiana. Having impressed Nightcap organizer Misha Rachlevsky a year ago with her technique, Bintz was invited by Rachlevsky to appear in the late-night concert series at the Unitarian Church.

Bintz's selections for the chamber-music concert of a Handel and a Faure sonata proved quite satisfying to the crowd, which was smaller than usual. Handel's four-movement Sonata in F Major was performed very evenly and precisely by the musician. Her notes are clear, and the sound was smooth. She handled the slower adagio and tango movements, balancing them between the livelier allegro sections.

Bintz's style is one of clarity and intense concentration, which lent itself nicely to the sustained qualities of the Handel sonata.

While her unemotional manner of presentation suited the classical work opening the program, the Sonata in A Major by Faure demanded a more expressive display of feeling from the young violinist and particularly from pianist James Winn.
