

Jury rules veterinarian's death was suicide

By Judith Berne
staff writer

An Illinois coroner's jury ruled last week that veterinarian Dr. Janice Runkle's death on an isolated Lake Michigan beach Aug. 1 was a suicide.

They have not proved it in any camera, photo paper and film to the first class meeting. Parents are encouraged to attend with their children.

gan beach Aug. 1 was a suicide. Her West Bloomfield parents, however, say they will continue to challenge that version of her death through federal courts.

as their daughter's height and weight were incorrectly stated in the inquest. The parents hired a New York City law firm, Daniel Foster, to investigate their daughter's death and to handle the disposition of her estate.

and a forensic pathologist.

THE INQUEST took less than two hours, according to Investigator Glen McIntyre, of the coroner's office. The panel deliberated a half hour before arriving at their verdict.

be two hours late, McIntyre said. His previous statements were related.

"POLICE CAN account for her whereabouts from the time she arrived in the state until her death," McIntyre added.

"Yeah, so old it's pathetic," answered Councilman Ralph Yoder.

Deadman said cost would be prohibitive because the city would have to pay Edison to remove the poles and install new ones.
