Eyewitness says Pope's attacker is still on the loose

Lowell Newton, Channel 7's editorial rector, is waiting for the other shoe netector, is waiting for the other stole to fall.

Newton was in St. Peter's Square last May 13 when Pope John Paul II was shot. The television newsman took two snapshots of a man with a revolver running away from the scene.

"My man is still at large, and the other shoe hasn't dropped yet," Newton said in a talk Thursday before the Southfield Chamber of Commerce.

Newton said a December copy of Tirje Magazine had sketches of five alleged hitmen in the United States. One sketch, he maintained, was the man he sawjin Romo on May 13.

"Mehmet All Agca, the Turkish nationalist, was charged in the attempted assassination of the pope," Newton said. "West German police arrested Agca's friend, Omar I. But I was worried that my man was in this country. saw in Rome on May 13. "Mehmet Ali Agea, t

"The FBI wanted to talk to me. I was told there was a remote possibility that I was in danger. After that, I was called to Rome to testify. I hopped a plane where I put on a bullet proof vest that belongs to Jerry Tobin (Southfield's public safety director)."

THE SOUTHFIELD resident recalled that day in May at 5 p.m. when he, his wife and another couple were among a crowd of 15,000 "loosely packed in a barricaded area" in St. Peter's Square.

"Pope John Paul didn't speak from a balcony. He drove through the crowd in a "Popemobile" — a pickup truck with a handrail in the back. The driver made his first swing, and the pope greeted and blessed the people.

"I was standing on a fountain four-foot high, looking at the crowd with my telephoto lens. I heard three gun shots, and it was like everything was in motion. I felt a slight wave of na

But, as a newsman, I got my adrenelin going to work for me." Newton saw a man with a revolver in his right hand running away from the crowd. Newton said he wasn't sure if the man was the assassin or an un-dercover police officer.

"My brain and body froze," he re-called. "Is aw a face and a gun I didn't want the man to see me watching him. When he passed by, I took two quick shots with my camera. I'm not a trained photographer. I ran out of film after the second picture."

Newton said be tried to talk to Italian police, but few understood English. They thought he was a "panicky tourist." He couldn't find a telephone or a cab so he walked back to his hotel where he was contacted by Channel 7.

"I SAID my pictures were of no value because they didn't show a face. I gave the negatives to the Italian police but kept the contact prints.

"Five days later, I was thinking that in my 25 years as a newsman, I never-saw one human being shoot another. I had seen bodies and the aftermath of had seen bodies and the aftermath of violent death."

Last July, Newton was watching elevision and saw a blowup of his pic-tures. They had appeared in magazines in Italy and Spain and had sold for $15,000, he said.

"I couldn't understand why I wasn't contacted by the Italian government until November, he said. "I was finally asked to testify after seven months. I flew to Rome on a Monday and came back on Wednesday.

"The jodge in Rome had just taken the bench and said he didn't know I was an eye-witness. He refused to answer my questions. I know there were two investigations — one secretive and one public."
