Scoliosis fund-raisers set March 21

Four area roller-skating rinks are offering skate-athons March 21 to raise money for scoliosis services and programs.

The fund-raisers are sponsored by the Southfield-based Scoliosis Association of Michigan and WNIC radio. The four participating roller rinks are Ambassador in Clawson, Bonaventure in Farmington Hills, Riverside in Livonia and Rolladine in Pontiac.

The theme of this second-annual skate-athon is "Skate to Keep Them Straight."

Skate-athons will be offered at different times at the different rinks. For a schedule of times, call the Scoliosis Association at 288-7221.

All skate-athons are open to the public. All proceeds will go to provide services and programs for children and adults with scoliosis, a crippling spinal disorder.

Health Day set at Mercy

Mercy College students, faculty and participants in the college's senior volunteer program will join forces to present the first Health Education Day at the Mercy Conference Center on March 24. The day-long event will feature nine student-led workshops on adult health issues.

Morning workshops include "Hypertension" by nursing student Donna McMartin of Warren; "Salt is Not the Spice of Life" by dietetics major Nancy Davidson of Warren; "Fitness after 40: Exercise for Health" by Kathy Kraus and Linda Everitt, nursing students from Southfield; "The Vital Vitamins" by dietetics student Alecia Harris of Riverview; and "Recognizing a Heart Attack" by respiratory care majors Phil Cost of Northwest Detroit and Carla Rykwalder of Allen Park.

Personal dietary information will be available during the lunch break; health-related films will also be shown, followed by faculty-led discussion and a question-and-answer period.

Afternoon sessions will include "The Patient and Medical Information" by medical record science majors Vickie McNeil of Inkster, Carol Rogers of Redford and Julie Kotoff of Dearborn; "Quack or Fact: Consumer Protection in the Market Place" by home economics student Diane Barker of Troy; "High-Quality Low-Cost Meatless Meals" by dietetics majors Gale Cox of Mount Clemens and Nancy Skowronek of Livonia; and "Diabetes: A Hidden Disease" by nursing students Theresa Sroka and Sue Pelpowski, both of Warren.

Participants in Mercy's Senior Volunteer Program will serve as session evaluators and hosts for the day. The recently instituted program prepares senior citizens to offer self-fulfilling public service through a structured program of instruction, field placement and supervision. This is one of the first projects they are working on.

According to Health Education Day coordinator and nursing instructor Johanna Tracy, "The idea for the day was conceived and developed in collaboration with the directors of WKYC-TV's Project Health-O-Rama as a means of further expanding community awareness in the area of health education. It was specially planned to follow Health-O-Rama screening programs in this area."

She said the inter-disciplinary approach of the program should appeal to a wide range of health needs.

The public is invited to attend one or several workshops on Health Education Day, which begins at 9:30 a.m. and ends at 3 p.m. All sessions are free of charge. For further information, call Mercy College at 592-6155.

School converted to cable studio

THE FORMER school kitchen is now the studio control room. The old library will be used for technical workshops instructing people about local programming.

The facility has ample room for sales, marketing, customer service, administration and an in-house computer system for regional billing, Hallstrom said.

Colt Weatherston Construction Co. of Detroit is converting the building for the cable company. This includes dropping ceilings for electrical conduits and air conditioning, Hallstrom said. Architect is Coquillard/Dolgar/Dundon/Argenta.

Candy MacGillivray, Continental program manager, said she's also pleased with the facility, especially for public access and local origination programming.

"Public access is television produced by and for residents," she said. "We're encouraging persons in the community to come in to our studio. We'll train them to use equipment and they'll be given the technical expertise to produce their own shows."

"We want to help non-profit organizations get their messages across and we'll work with schools so they'll learn how to use cable. Cable runs the gamut from entertainment to education on whatever the community feels is important."

LOCAL ORIGINATION broadcasting is one of Continental's functions, MacGillivray said.

"We'll keep our eyes and ears on community needs. Cable is where television was back in the 1950s. It's not Hollywood — it's localized, innovative and fun."

Continental plans to cover school sports, local cultural events such as concerts and the ice show and other civic events, MacGillivray said.

Studio and portable video equipment will be made available to the public for field production, she said. Satellite facilities will be set up at Southfield City Hall and other locations.

Southfield car dealer refuses to make a sale to former customer

By Jackie Klein
staff writer

Fonda Droz isn't in the mood right now to hear, "When life gives you lemons, make lemonade."

The Southfield resident claims she bought a "lemon" in October 1979 and instead of lemonade she got nothing but aggravation.

The source of Droz's frustration was a 1979 Buick and the dealer who sold it to her couldn't fix it properly. So she took the car to Tamaroff, which is closer to her Southfield home. But, she said, she wasn't satisfied with the service there, either.

"I'd give the mechanic five things to do and he'd do one. So I got disgusted and sold the car after the transmission was rebuilt three times."

"Then I bought a Toyota and that was a lemon, too. The Toyota dealer couldn't repair it, took the car back and refunded my money. I decided I wanted a four-door, silver Honda Accord and I called Tamaroff to hold one for me."

The manager, according to Droz, said the dealership couldn't hold a car for a customer. When she called an hour later, Droz maintains, she was told the car wasn't available.

"I went to Tamaroff with my lawyer and I was kept waiting 20 minutes. Salesmen said all Honda Accords were sold. I said I'd buy a Buick Regal. But I was told they were all gone, too."

Droz said she finally went to another dealership and bought a Honda for $3,340.

"I got a better deal than I could have gotten at Tamaroff," she said. "But I'm still sore."
