IN "DEAR WORLD," a motley group of street folk and eccentrics join ranks against the pinstripe powers of a business cartel that wants to make money at any cost. The cartel proposes to bomb a neighborhood cafe so it can put up an oil rig and drill for black gold on the cafe site.
The bad guys are as greedy for laughs as they are for cash, especially the snidely sinister President, played by John Tillotson, and the bald-pated, table to the next, with musical instruments. The band even entertained the cooks in the kitchen who "liked us so much they showered us with dough," Panicucci quipped.

The St. Aubin Street Ramblers has only been at Cooper's Arms for a few months, but it looks like the group is as much a part of the place as the moosehead over the mantel.
Come on out for a rags-to-musical-riches kind of night.

vapid Vice President, John McWilliams, who makes us laugh just by standing beside his lowering dingbat of a wife, played by Harriet Fox.
Do the folks of Paris who believe in love at first sight and feeding vagabond cats have a chance against corporate greed that it wants to turn every park into a parking lot? When the mad woman of Chailiot plots her genteel revenge, the real crazies of the world are doomed.
The production is directed by James T. Robertson, Jr.
