"We're now saying we'll use them."

The nuclear arms debate has brought many to social concern for the first time. It is attracting not just draft-age people, but service veterans, housewives, doctors and churchgoers.

There is concern about the amount of military spending, responsibility of having nuclear weapons on hand as

Halls mark 50th year

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hall of Farmington Hills celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a surprise dinner hosted by their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. V. Bentivolio, also of Farmington Hills.

The couple were married March 5, 1932.

After dinner the guests were hosted by Mr. and Mrs. John Pesci in their home for an informal get-together. Mrs. Pesci is Bentivolio's sister.

Among the 50 guests were the couple's only grandson, Steve Chick of Highland, Mich. Mrs. Hall's sister and brother, neices and nephews came from Butler, Pa. to attend the celebration.

well as the moral issues involved in waging total war.

"This is not a radical thing," said the Rev. Jim Sam, pastor of St. Benedict Catholic Church in Southfield, which is forming a peace and justice group.

"People from all walks of life are concerned."

"Peace is no longer just the property of folk singers, clergy and the fringe," said the Rev. Erik Kolbell.

The member of the Oakland University Ministerial Association helped organize the new Rochester Peace Group, which last month held workshops on topics like "Getting Disarmament into the Public Schools" and a history of the nuclear arms race. OU will be the site of a symposium on bilateral disarmament and national security April 19.

"There is more concern among the middle class for the arms race. And their greatest concern is for their children," said the United Church of Christ minister.

Dave Wysocik, campaign coordinator for the Michigan Mutual Nuclear Weapons Freeze ballot proposal, believes 75 percent of those involved have never protested anything before.

"I feel strongly that this should not be considered a reflection of the peace movement of the past," said the first-time activist.
