Toxic waste unit looks for work

Southeastern Michigan's industry daily produces hundreds of thousands of tons of waste — which up buried in someone's backyard.

"It's not surprising, with so much waste, that some will be disposed of improperly or illegally. Some is done through ignorance, some on purpose," said Larry C. Holcomb, executive secretary to the state Toxic Substance

Control Commission. Holcomb and several Toxic Sub-stance Control commissioners are hold-ing public hearings across the state distent to people's complaints about haz-ardous waste problems in their areas. Last month, the TSCC drew about 100 people to a hearing at Oakland Com-munity College.

THE COMMISSION, whose members are appointed by the governor for two-year terms, was formed in 1979. Its job is to be a watchdog over the Department of Natural Resources, the Department of Argriculture and any other state agency responsible for monitoring environmental and public health complaints.

lem, we investigate it. We get on the DNR's back, ask for reports, and keep on top of the case.

"The DNR (and other agencies) don't have to respond to us — but they do, because of peer pressure," Holcomb sald.

At the conclusion of hearings this month, the commission will make recommendations to the governor and the Michigan Legislature for statutes and resultations.

MOST COMPLAINTANTS at the OCC meeting lived in industrial townships which had overflowing landfills contaminating their ground water. They told commissioners horror stories spanning 10 years with no progress except increased pollution.

A Shelby Township representative, Bill Finland, told of a landfill near his Atthough Fluitand appealed to DNR fifelds numerous times during the past five years, he said his efforts were ruttless.

"If I had been in charge of that ("DNR) management," Holcomb said, "that landfill would have been shut down five years ago. It may be reopened now, but it would have been shut down until the problems were fixed. Even some DNR people are sorry they didn't take action a long time ago."

BRIGHTON resident Carol Taylor said that the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) contaminated her drinking water. She lives near an area where road salt is stored. In 1972, she said, salt began seeping into their drinking water.

"They (MDOT) knew they were con-taminating our drinking water. Salt comes out of our tap, it's eating through my pipes, and we've been on bottled water for 31/2 years.

"The state told us three years ago that they would put in a new water system for us, but nothing's been done." Holcomb called MDOT "extremely negligent."

"I don't like to say that until we do an investigation, but we do know there is a very high salt concentration in the water that makes it not safe to drink, and we know the lake is highly pollut-ed," Holcomb said.

"If a state agency is responsible for the polluting someone's water, then they should be responsible for provid-ing relief."
