

'Annie' benefit aids channel 56

"This is the fourth group we've had doing this routine," Sulek said.

THE EARLIER ANNIES had home-sewn outfits, but this crew is going to the big parties in store-bought style. Sears, Roebuck and Co., which is starting to market red polyester dresses with white collars and belts and Annie insignias, called Sulek to offer outfits for the dancers performing for the benefit.

The girls mothers then found them black strap shoes and laced on the cuffs of white anklets.

And then came the hairdos and Jan Henrick's contribution.

"We found some wigs, but they were light brown and very tightly curled," she said. "I had to tease them all up, and then pick each ringlet out."

And then she found some orange-red paint and arranged the wigs on her front lawn for the spray job she figured must have confused her neighborhood.

At the premiere party, they should fit well with the other guests. The preferred dress of the evening will be combinations of red and white for the women present. The men will wear black ties, except the ones who belonged to the "red tie committee," the group of 170 in charge of the Channel 56 benefits.

Tickets are available from Sears stores, in six Heidi beauty salons, or through Channel 56, 873-7200, ext. 118.

brought the Nguyen family to the United States from a Cambodian refugee camp and had helped them adjust to their new home.

The Rev. William Saum conducted the services which were attended by a large number of the congregation and members of the Vietnamese community. During the services, 10 family friends shared their thoughts about Man Le Thin with the congregation. "If there was a common thread in the service, it was what a loving and giving person Man was and that we had been privileged and blessed by his presence. She had given us far more than we had given her," Saum said.

Burial was at Glen Eden Memorial Park in Livonia following the services. The Church of Our Savior is accepting donations for the Nguyen family, who are still paying off debts, including their transportation to the United States.

The Rev. Edward Prus conducted a memorial mass Monday at the Shrine of the Little Flower, Royal Oak, for the second victim, Mai Ngo. Her daughter and other relatives came from California for the services.

Catch this catch

A 21-pound dolphin was caught by Jeff Schultz, of Farmington Hills in the 47th Annual Metropolitan South Florida Fishing Tournament recently. He caught the fish from the Helen C-I piloted by Capt. John Greenhaw out of Castaway's Dock in North Miami Beach.
