Lunar eclipse inspires lunacy

While this reporter didn't make it to Ann Arbor, the same moon they watched could be seen out of the bedroom window of my apartment. The only startling moment occurred when a stray cat jumped on the window sill as I pushed away the shade to gaze at the moon.

I stayed up after hearing Loudon predict that "the light lighting the moon is quite literally the combined light of all the combined sunrises and sunsets on the earth at the time."

Wow.

If that wasn't enough, Loudon said the colors should be even more brilliant because of volcano on April 4 in El Chichon, Mexico which injected dust and sulphuric acid into the earth's upper atmosphere which would add to the light show on the moon.

To these untrained, unscientific eyes the moon looked dark and dirty brown — OK, maybe copper — at its best during the lunar eclipse.

UNLIKE A SOLAR eclipse — where the moon passes in front of the sun — the light of a lunar eclipse is safe to watch "as long as you don't get too close" to its source, the sun, Loudon joked.

Scientists use a solar eclipse to view the sun's corona which appears as a ring around the moon in a solar eclipse but there are no such revelations in observing a lunar eclipse these days, Loudon says.

As recently as the 1960s scientists used the lunar eclipse as an opportunity to measure the surface temperature on the moon. They'd measure the moon temperature by comparing the temperature of a spot on the moon when it was bathed in sunlight to its temperature during darkness.

Today, Loudon says, scientists use more sophisticated microwave radio telescopes which literally can measure the heat of a birthday candle 60 feet away or near-absolute-zero readings on the moons of Uranus 2 billion miles away. If you're interested, the temperature on Uranus' moons are as low as liquid nitrogen (almost 410 degrees below zero Fahrenheit).

See what you can learn just by looking up at the moon? Next lunar eclipse happens early on the morning of Dec. 30. You're on your own.

Vet clinic opens

"A lot of hard work has to be done, but people will realize this is a different hospital, a different doctor," Shaya said. "With time it'll be evident this is a different set-up. I did it in Grosse Pointe, I can do it in Farmington."

Plans call for an addition to be built on the front of the building to accommodate a waiting room, a reception area and two examining rooms.

Plans call for more examining rooms and rebuilding the entire existing structure. If the facility is successful, Shaya said, he may petition the city's planning commission to build a small strip shopping center on the property.

Shaya took over the Grosse Pointe animal clinic 12 years ago and was honored this year by the city of Grosse Pointe Park with a certificate of appreciation for the appearance of his property and surroundings.

He expanded to Farmington Hills, he said, because the area is relatively affluent. He and his wife, Mary, are the parents of three boys and one girl and own a German shepherd and two cats. He calls the animals "a part of the family."

Fined over flu shots

any definitive conclusions about specific causes of death extremely difficult.

- There was no causal association between immunization with influenza vaccine and deaths during November (No pathologist report confirming this was included in the report).

- An outbreak of respiratory viral infection in the nursing home occurred in November at the home;

- Death certificates were completed without access to medical records and did not provide useful public health information. (Sixteen of the 18 death certificates listed cause of death as cardiopulmonary arrest and arteriosclerotic heart disease. Only one reported pneumonia as the cause of death.)

- The high death rate among patients in the nursing home due to respiratory infections reflects their advanced age and relatively debilitated condition.
