Hearing impaired are helped at fair

The United States and Baptist Ministries pavilions are furnishing interpreters for the hearing impaired at the World's Fair in Knoxville.

Fifteen volunteers take turns interpreting a musical drama at the Baptist Ministries Pavilion. A marquee outside the building announces the schedule of show, noting which of the five daily presentations will be signed. Coordinated by Jerry Seale, minister for the deaf at First Baptist Church of Knoxville, the interpreters are also available 20 minutes before and after the performance to answer questions and to counsel deaf visitors upon request.

Visitors to the U.S. Pavilion will, upon request, be accompanied by one of four guides trained in deaf education and interpreting.

"Most of the exhibits in the U.S. Pavilion are visually oriented, but interpreters are on hand to answer questions and interpret the displays," said Terri Galla, press officer at the U.S. Pavilion. "We encourage visitors to contact the pavilion in advance to ensure the presence of an interpreter during their tour." Simultaneous interpretation of the movie "Energy: Energy!" is also available.

Both the United States and the Baptist Ministries will continue to provide interpreters through the Fair's closing date of Oct. 31.

The scouts are with Dr. John H. Richardson and Rob Finegan, who are leaders of the troop sponsored by Central United Church of Christ.
