

AAUW honors Wright, Conover, Cummings

Farmington Branch American Association of University Women (AAUW) paid tribute to three of its members with the announcement that named grants would be sent to the National Foundation of AAUW in their honor.

The honorees are Margorie Conover, Phyllis Cummings and the late Margaret Wright.

The money that made the grants possible came from the group's annual fund-raiser, the fall used-book sale given last year. The tradition continues this fall when money will be raised for more educational grants to be given next year.

Many branches of AAUW across the country hold the sales to raise money to support educational fellowships and scholarships. Of the 74 branches in Michigan, Farmington's sale generated the largest per-capita contribution to the national fund in 1981.

This year's sale runs from Sept. 16-19 in Livonia Mall throughout regular mall hours.

"We're justifiably proud of the sale and enthusiastically participate in making it successful each year," said Ellen Harper, a co-chairperson of the 1982 event.

MARGARET WRIGHT, known to her friends as Peg, died this spring after a long illness.

She is credited by branch members with the organization of the sale. Her chairmanship in 1975 was a turning point in its success and brought about a cohesiveness which is carried on each year, branch members said.

Margorie Conover is well known in the Farmington area for her work with special services for the handicapped. She chaired the book sale for two years and started the plan for transporting books by those in New Horizons, the retarded adults living and working in a sheltered environment.

Phyllis Cummings is the branch's immediate past president and has assumed the responsibilities for chairing the 1983 book sale, a job which begins very on the day after the 1982 sale ends.

ONE OF THE hallmarks of the Farmington AAUW sale is the sorting of books into categories to facilitate the buyers' ease in locating their favorites.

Noting the rising popularity of romantic-gothic novels, the sale workers incorporated a special section for them, and now, "bores and boxes await the reader in the mail for the week-end," Harper said.

The sale features some vintage National Geographic and a large number of virtually new books at low prices.

The sale again will feature an all-day Sunday bag sale which allows the buyer a chance to fill a grocery bag of books for $1.

Book barrels used as receptacles for used books remain in Great Scott at 13 Mile and Orchard Lake Road; in the A & P in Downtown Farmington Center and Krogers at Grand River and Halsted.

Book donation pickup service is available by calling Harper at 553-2406.

Storytellers open new season

Detroit Story League opens its 1982-83 season at noon Saturday, Sept. 18, in Farmington Community Center, on Farmington Road, north of 10 Mile, with an open invitation to the public.

The historic building was chosen for the session as the league enters its 71st year of giving storytelling programs and preparing the ancient art.

There is no charge to visitors for any of the monthly meetings, and there is no charge to groups who wish to arrange for a storytelling program.

Members and guests bring their own sandwich lunch. Hostesses for the day, Lorraine Davis of Redford, Florence Sharp of Union Lake and Barbara Smith of Southfield, furnish beverage and dessert.

Storytellers for the day are Linda J. Aldrich of Plymouth, who is the group's new president; Lucille Lents of Dearborn; and Bruce Smith of Clarkston.

Those interested in joining the league may meet members at the opening meeting or call Aldrich at 420-2588.

"We train new members and put them right to work," said Bob Kroepel of Farmington. "We need all the tellers we can get to keep up with the demand for storytelling."

Members will be bringing used clothing in good repair to be sold in the and Doris Cooney of Redford teamed up for a storytelling session for the women of First Methodist Church of Plymouth this week.

Aldrich headed up two workshops for Farmington teachers this week concerning storytelling and children's literature.

Smith just finished a program of camp songs and stories for the Oxford Library's award night.

Yvonne Bell is booked for sessions with the Novi Library.

Alyce Glatzbecker is booked for a series of ghost stories for the Bryant Library in Dearborn.

"It's a typical agenda these days," Kroepel said.
