Symphonic appreciation taught at Marygrove

"Know your Symphony," a 12-week course designed to complement the current season of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will be offered from Sept. 10 to Dec. 7 at Marygrove College in northwest Detroit.
The course will be taught by Sue Ann Vanderbeck, assistant professor of music, and will run each Tuesday evening for the 12 weeks from 5:45-7 p.m. Marygrove is located at 8425 West McNichols at Wyoming.

"Know Your Symphony" will be offered through the Music Department and the Division of Continuing Education and is designed to assist laymen and symphony-goers in listening appreciatively and in evaluating objectively live performances of music.

Each class session will focus on works selected from the symphonic and concerto repertoire to be performed that week by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at Ford Auditorium. Admission to the fall season of DSO concerts is included in the $65 tuition.
The course is designed to cultivate an understanding of what to listen for in music.

Registration for the symphony course can be done in person at Marygrove by mail with a check or money order or by phone with a credit card. For more information, contact Vanderbeck at 862-8000, Ext. 316, or the Division of Continuing Education at 862-8000, Ext. 240.
