Susan Berry appointed business director

PBI Schools, Inc., has appointed Susan Berry as the new director of Pontiac Business Institute, Farmington.

Prior to the appointment, Berry was the placement representative and student services coordinator for Pontiac Business Institute, Oxford. Berry began at PBI in Oxford as a part-time instructor in June 1980. She also worked for National Bank of Detroit and operated her own business before joining Pontiac Business Institute.

For the past nine years, Berry has taught Sunday school to retarded young adults through the Detroit Council of Churches. She has also taught night school in both the Brandon and Clarkson school districts and is presently active in the Clarkson Girl Scouts.

Berry has a B.A. in secondary education from Oakland University and is beginning her master's in guidance and counseling. Her position at PBI in Farmington began Sept. 13.

Canadian architect speaks at LIT

Is a bulldozer the "symbol of North America"? Are its city streets "wastelands of parked cars"? Canadian architect Arthur Erickson, who appeared at Lawrence Institute of Technology on Sept. 16, seems to think so.

Erickson, the first speaker in LIT's Architecture Series, has said that most city architecture reeks of indifference because "architects are so rarely aware of their own powers of communication."

Erickson's most internationally recognized work is Simon Fraser University in his native Vancouver. Although he does much of his work in his hometown, including reconstructing the city's center, he is also well known in the other parts of the world. His international projects have included structures in Tokyo, Montreal, Japan and Arabia. He is also exploring the possibility of opening an office in Peking, employing native people, ideas and technology.

Erickson, though not well known in the United States, has been described by Philip Johnson, former chairman of Yale University's Dept. of Architecture, as "by far the greatest architect in Canada, and maybe the greatest on the continent."

A graduate of McGill University, Erickson was featured on the cover of Time Magazine as "Canada's master architect." His firm, Arthur Erickson Architects (AEA), has offices in Vancouver, Toronto, Los Angeles and abroad.

For further information on the presentations call Gary Keekes in the LIT School of Architecture at 558-0200.

Driver cited, boy recovers

After investigating the cause of a two-car collision which occurred July 10 at the Mayfield and Grand River intersection, Farmington Police ticketed the driver of the car that failed to yield to oncoming traffic.

Lt. Frank Lashoff of the Farmington Police Department says that after reviewing witnesses' reports, the driver of a maroon Chevrolet, Narendra (Nick) Sheth, 37, of Farmington Hills was given a ticket for failing to yield to oncoming traffic while making a left turn onto Mayfield from westbound Grand River.

A 47th District Court official said if found guilty of a traffic infraction, Sheth would have to pay a fine of $40 because the accident resulted in an injury.

The driver of the other car, Claudia Wiseman, 27, of South Lyon, wasn't ticketed.

While Sheth was treated and released the same day from cuts he suffered in the accident, his 2-year-old son, Samir, required four days of hospitalization and facial surgery. Earlier reports from Botsford Hospital spokesman Russ Tuttle stating that the boy was treated and released on the day of the accident were incorrect.

A spokesman for the family said the child's surgery was successful and Samir is "feeling OK, but weak." His father is the former manager of the Burger King restaurant in Farmington, directly across from the accident site.
