Sharing gives dimension to holidays

Christmas time means many things to many people. This past week your columnist inquired of many folks what this time of year means to them.

Younger children only think of gifts while an older generation emphasizes the anticipation of reunions with friends and adult children. The ladies I visit in a nursing home have lost appreciation of the glitter but stress friendships and being remembered.

Twenty-three years ago Detroit said "goodbye" to poet emeritus Edgar down to earth

Alice Burlingame

Guest, whose poems appeared regularly in 200 newspapers. "It takes a heap of livin' in a house 't make it home," from his poem "Home" easily stimulates recall of all of the good times we can savor.

To share our homes with others at this time of year is a gift which gives a real dimension to the holidays. There is still time to offer this treasure which only you can share with another.

Your columnist is looking forward to sharing "Down to Earth" in 1983 with you and is bursting with ideas to expand your knowledge of plants and nature which are an important part of "the good life." Best wishes for the holidays and may 1983 provide you with unlimited bonuses of happy living.
