

Second runs

Tom Panzenhagen

"Mighty Joe Young" (1949), 1 a.m. (Friday, March 18) on Ch. 50. Originally 94 minutes. Joe Young is King Kong's cinematic offspring, but it's hard to figure why filmmakers waited 16 years for the rebirth. Certainly the special effects are no better in the later film than they were in the original, yet "Mighty Joe Young" has a camp appeal about it that's infectious. Terry Moore and Ben Johnson star, and Robert Armstrong reappears in the role he created in "King Kong".
Rating: $2.70.

"The Wizard of Oz" (1939), 8 p.m. (Friday, March 18, on Ch. 2. Originally 101 minutes. Easter can't be far away if they're carting out "The Wizard of Oz." Judy Garland, of course, stars as Dorothy, who learns the hard way that there's no place like home. The technicolor spectacle is as clatter-garish or decorative — a lot like art deco of the 1930s — depending upon your point of view. And the storyline either sparks wonderment or nightmares depending, perhaps, upon your age. Score is by Harold Arlen and E.Y. Harburg. Ray Bolger, Jack Haley, Bert Lahr, Margaret Hamilton, Frank Morgan and Billie Burke also star.
Rating: $3.

"The Quiet Man" (1952), 2 a.m. (Saturday, March 19, on Ch. 2. Originally 129 minutes.
Rating: $2.80

"The Quiet Man" is vintage John Wayne and John Ford, coming after "Rio Grande" but before "The Searchers." It is by far, however, the most sentimental of all Wayne-Ford films, more misty-eyed even than "The Yellow Ribbon" (1949). Wayne, a boxer who has killed a ring opponent, returns to his homeland in the Emerald Isle, and there finds breathtakingly beautiful countryside and stereotypically quaint Irish. The film paints a picture of the Irish that's about as accurate as the depiction of Vietnamese in another Wayne film, "The Green Berets." Still, somehow, the film endures and enchants. Maureen O'Hara, Victor McLaglen and Barry Fitzgerald also star.
Rating: $3.10.

"Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" (1967), 4:30 p.m. (Sunday, March 20, on Ch. 50. Originally 108 minutes.

Director Stanley Kramer and co-star Katharine Hepburn doubt that Spencer Tracy would live through the filming of this, his last picture. Tracy died a few weeks after its completion. The film — a sort of updating of Tracy's "Father of the Bride" (1950) but with a rather significant plot twist — is a one-joke film. The plot won't hold your attention, but Tracy and Hepburn will.
Rating: $2.80
