Art Alive

ARTISTS AND CULTURAL institutions are like the facets on a fine diamond; they give a city like Southfield enrichment, dazzle, life.

Today we recognize as "art" the heritage created when a woman painstakingly put together a handcrafted quilt or her husband lovingly carved a cradle in the place we now call Southfield.

The touch of the artisan was in the design of unusual fence or gatepost, the architecture of schools and barns, and the unique touches incorporated into everyday household items.

Treasures like the Jenny Lind bed from the Mary Thompson farm with its rich nut-tone wood and graceful curves say eloquently that back in 1850 what felt good and looked good was appreciated in these parts.

Today, Southfield is a community that takes care to nurture its artisans and the appreciation of art and architecture.

Festival 2001, certain to be the forerunner of many such art enhancing
