

Daughters of Charity Celebrate 350 Years

They came to Detroit in 1844 to open the first hospital in Michigan, bringing with them a heritage dating to 17th century France when St. Vincent de Paul and St. Louise de Marillac founded the Community to care for the sick and the needy in the ghettos of Paris. Today, the Daughters of Charity sponsor health care, teaching and social service works through their hospitals and respond to the needs of their times with the same loving spirit as that of their founders.

From humble beginnings to Providence Hospital on the Boulevard, 1910.

Providence Hospital today continues to be a leader in the health care community.

St. Elizabeth Ann Seton, founder of the Daughters of Charity, died in 1809.

Vincentough South Fisher Center, Daughters care for centuries old traditions for children and young adults.

St. Vincent de Paul and St. Louise de Marillac founded the Daughters of Charity in 1633.

The Daughters of Charity carry out their local ministries at:

Providence Hospital, Southfield
Providence Ambulatory Care Center, Novi
Providence Family Health Center, South Lyon
St. Vincent and Samli Fisher Center, Farmington Hills